Peace Depends Upon Full Aid, Truman Asserts

Marshall Plan Cuts Would Change It To Wasteful Relief, President Says

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

President Truman made the emphatic statement yesterday that the peace of the world depended on Congressional approval of the full Marshall Plan.

With emotion in his voice and manner, he told his news conference that cutting the size of the European Recovery Program would change it into a wasteful relief project.

It would be Operation Rathole, the President said, if too few dollars were appropriated to produce real recovery in Europe. He said he felt very strongly about it, and he showed it by the fervor of his voice as he warmed to the subject.

Authorization Stressed

At first he sounded as if he were taking an all-or-none stand in the face of a strong Republican movement in Congress to trim the cost of the program. Under questioning, however, he put greater stress on getting the full 4¼-year authorization.

By throwing himself so forcefully into the controversy over the cost of ERP, the President overshadowed these other developments yesterday:

1. At the request of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the World Bank submitted its own estimates showing that $6,800,000,000 was too little to meet Europe's needs for the first 15 months.

2. The Committee for the Marshall Plan, headed by Henry L. Stimson, attacked Chairman Styles Bridges of the Senate Appropriations Committee for calling the President's foreign aid requests "phony." It said Bridges was misinformed or speaking without regard to the basic elements of Government procurement."

Hill Seeks Explanation

3. There was a growing demand on Capitol Hill for explanation of the Budget Bureau's estimate that $2,300,000,000 of the requested $6,800,000,000 would not have to be spent during the 1948-9 fiscal year. Informed officials said yesterday that most of this amount was the cost of goods that would actually be shipped, but not yet paid for, by the end of the fiscal year.

It was this $2,300,000,000 figure which touched off President Truman's discussion yesterday. A

President Asks Extension Of Distillery Controls

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday asked Congress for continuation until October 31 of his expiring power to limit the use of grain for the manufacture of beverage alcohol.

Mr. Truman's action came two days after the House Banking Committee had pigeonholed a measure, already passed by the Senate, extending present restrictions on the use of grain by distillers until February 29.

The President's appeal apparently fell upon deaf ears—at least as far as the House Banking Committee was concerned.

Last night it was reported that a group of Republican members of the committee had sought reconsideration of the action killing the bill. A request to Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), now in Chicago, to return so that action might be taken before Saturday night, when all controls over grain allocations expire, was met by Wolcott's refusal. Wolcott said he could not get back before Sunday night—a day after present restrictions will be lifted.

The President's message declared "that there is at present a critical shortage of grain which threatens to become even more

Russians Load Grain Cargoes For Britain

London, Jan. 29 (NYHT).—J. Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, announced in the Commons today the first shipments of Russian grain to Britain are now being loaded at Soviet ports.

On other trade fronts, however, Britain is continuing to encounter squally weather.

Chief setback has been in Argentina, where efforts to reach a broad financial and trade agreement have now failed and the talks are being adjourned for at least several months. Argentine meat shipments are coming to an end, which might mean a ration cut later on.

Argentine price demands were described officially here as "far higher than those we could accept as reasonable." In fact, they are 50 per cent higher than present world prices. The entire trade mission probably will now be withdrawn.

Wilson disclosed to the Commons that a trade mission will go to Rio de Janeiro soon to discuss "financial and economic matters of mutual interest to the United Kingdom and Brazil."

He also said trade negotiations with the Netherlands, adjourned before Christmas, will be resumed at The Hague next month.

Truman Fails To Explain Eccles Action

Denies Replacing Head Of Federal Reserve At Somebody's Request

(See Business Outlook, by J. A. Livingston, Page 16.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman said yesterday that there would be no explanation from him of why he decided to shake up the Federal Reserve Board.

The question came up at a White House news conference. A reporter wanted to know what prompted him to replace Marriner Eccles, New Deal chairman of the board, with Thomas B. McCabe, a Philadelphia Republican.

Mr. Truman replied that he had exercised his prerogatives. It was his right, he said, and he added that he did not make the change at anybody's request or under anybody's influence.

"Do you prefer Mr. McCabe's fiscal policies to Mr. Eccles'?" a reporter asked.

Mr. Truman said that was a question he would not answer.

Reminded that Chairman Tobey of the Senate Banking Committee was eager to find out what "forces" were behind the shake-up, Mr. Truman repeated that he had simply exercised his prerogatives under the law.

"People would like an explanation, though," a reported said.

It was at this point that the Chief Executive said there would be no explanation.

Later, in a jocular mood, he said that Congress could make an investigation, but it could not investigate the President—not, at least, without impeaching him.

Somebody wanted to know what Mr. Truman thought about Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's action in removing himself from the presidential race.

Mr. Truman said that General Eisenhower had control of his own destiny. Therefore, he said, amid laughter, if General Eisenhower thought that was the best thing for General Eisenhower to do—well, he was all for it.

Democrats Rally Forces On Tax Plan

House Leadership Seeking Substitute For Knutson Bill; GOP Speeds Action

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Administration's House leadership last night took a hand in the Democratic election year split over tax reduction, as the House opened debate on the GOP's 6.5-billion-dollar general income tax xslash.

For more than an hour after the House tax fracas closed for the day former Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) dickered with Democratic taxmakers on the House Ways and Means Committee.

Object: A Democratic substitute for the Knutson bill commanding enough support to avert any general party break to the GOP bill.

No Conclusions

No conclusions were reached, and the talks will be resumed today. Rayburn, flanked by Democratic Whip John W. McCormack (Mass.) told reporters however that a "substantive" motion to recommit the Knutson bill will be offered.

In effect, this was an answer to Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck's forecast that Democrats couldn't agree on anything but a simple motion to recommit, without tax cut alternatives.

The Democratic leadership stepped in after Democrats united in condemnation of the Knutson cuts but divided on the President's proposal to substitute $40 tax cuts for all, offset by a 75 per cent excess profits tax on corporations.

Vote Due Monday

Democratic sentiment last night appeared to be crystallizing in favor of salvaging at least the excess profits phase of the President's plan in any motion to recommit. Most of the argument revolved around what tax cuts would be added.

Democratic differences ranged all the way from Representative Robert L. Doughton's declaration for nearly everything in the Knutson bill to Representative John D. Dingell's straight espousal of the President's plan.

The voting will come Monday, after the House concludes general debate today and recesses for the week-end. House passage of the Knutson bill is taken for granted. Democrats generally concede this, just as they freely predict the Senate will revise it or a veto will stop it. The Democratic election year stake lies not in stopping the bill in the House but in making a united stand against it, with an effective tax reduction alternative.

Democrats Cry 'Gag'

Over Democratic cries of "gag," the Republican-controlled House yesterday adopted a closed rule giving the minority only one chance to change the bill—a final motion to recommit.

Minnesota's Harold Knutson, whose last two four-billion dollar tax-reduction moves were vetoed by the President, opened debate with a direct bid for Democratic votes.

Saying the President is "amazingly inconsistent" on the tax issue, he told Democrats:

"Do not be misled again. If there ever was a need to encourage production to combat inflation it is today. If there ever was a need to provide relief to the individual income taxpayer from oppressive war income taxes which are stifling initiative and preventing business expansion, it is today."

The Democratic rift broke into the open when Representative Eugene Cox (D., Ga.) declared it would be "not much more than a piece of foolishness" for the Democrats to offer the President's plan.

Saying the people expect tax reduction and the President's pro-

Clegg Board Dissenter Urges Police Protection for Innocent

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Police Department yesterday was called upon to give District citizens the assurance it is "just as much interested in protecting the innocent . . . as it is in apprehending the guilty."

The call was issued by James O'D. Moran, lone nonpolice member of the three-man trial board who dissented to exonerating all police involved in the arrest and detention of Julius Willie Clegg last August.

The assurance was urged by Moran in his minority dissenting opinion, written 10 days ago but made public for the first time yesterday by the District Commissioners.

In officially commenting on the report, Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett said, in effect, that the police will stand pat on their policy of making arrests for "investigation." The Commissioners made no comment.

Clegg, a 26-year-old Negro war veteran, was arrested at 6 a. m. of August 2 at the corner of 13th and E sts. nw., and held for investigation on an open charge for 34 hours before being released. The arrest followed complaints to the police that a Negro had been molesting two women in that vicinity. Through counsel, Clegg charged he had been illegally arrested and detained, held incommunicado and beaten.

The charges were aired early this month before a police board composed of two police officials and

Meat Control Plans Still Undecided

President Agrees With Agriculture Official on Price Pegs With Rationing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

President Truman said yesterday the Administration has not yet decided that price control and rationing of meat are necessary, but some Senate Republican leaders are privately conceding the possibility that Congress may adopt such controls before the end of this session.

The Chief Executive told his news conference that his Administration's attitude on meat controls is not yet fixed, although a high Agriculture Department official yesterday outlined a sweeping plan to ration meat and control food prices.

The Administrations stand appears to be one, as the President conceded, of uncertainty.

Charles F. Brannan, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, warned the Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday that the time for meat controls is now.

Brannan said that price controls should be imposed along with rationing. Only two weeks ago Agriculture Secretary Clinton P. Anderson said he contemplated rationing without consumer price controls.

Republican Support

President Truman told his news conference that he agreed with Brannan that rationing without price controls would be risky. Price controls must come first if a program is adopted, the President said.

One well-informed Senate Republican leader based his forecast of the possibility of meat controls on two main factors—an all-out Administration drive and the increased drain on meat supplies if and when the Marshall Plan is adopted.

It was pointed out in GOP circles yesterday that a number of Republican Senators have already indicated some sympathy with meat controls, making it entirely possible that if the Administration pressed for the measure it might go through the Senate.

Although Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) of the House Banking and Currency Committee has insisted the only control that could be adopted this session is rent control, it is obvious that if the Senate adopts meat controls, the House will be under strong pressure to go along.

Considered Since November

The Marshall Plan throws still another question into the meat control situation.

The question is being raised among Senate Republicans as to what the attitude of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), is going to be if the meat supply here will not be adequate, without rationing, to meet foreign commitments.

Vandenberg's influence, it is conceded, would be sufficient to send a rationing and price control bill through the Senate.

President Truman said the Administration has had a meat control plan under consideration since November—when he asked Congress for standby powers to ration

Laborites Lose First Commons Seat Since 1945

Glasgow, Scotland, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Conservative Party has won a House of Commons seat from Britain's Labor Party for the first time since the Laborites' general election victory of 1945.

In a by-election at Calmachie yesterday, Conservative Charles McFarlane received 11,085 votes to Laborite John M. Inglis' 10,690.

Moran Phillips, secretary of the Labor Party, said McFarlane won only because there were six candidates in the field. McFarlane is a Glasgow hardware manufacturer.

In 35 other by-elections in the last two and a half years, Labor retained 22 seats. The Conservatives retained nine and gained three from independents.

The Labor Party holds more seats in the House of Commons now than it did after the 1945 general election. Since then four members have resigned from the far left independent Labor Party and from the Liberal Party, affiliating with the Laborites.

The Calmachie election fills a vacancy caused by the death of the Rev. Campbell Stephen. In a two-man contest in the general election, Stephen won from McFarlane by a margin of 4159 votes.

Arrival of 2 Oil Barges Eases District Fuel Crisis

Ship Reaches Ice-Bound Potomac Lighthouse

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

COAST GUARD IN ACTION—Coast guardsmen stand on the deck of the cutter Madrona, which cut through Potomac ice yesterday to within 50 feet of the ice-bound Mathias lighthouse, near Morgantown, Md. Lighthouse-tender John C. Lewis, Chief Boatswain's Mate Edwin B. Midgett and Seaman 1/c James M. Carter declined the Madrona's invitation to food and warmth and, using their own dory as a sled, pushed a quarter mile to shore at Owens, Va., Lewis' home. It was the first time in seven years that ice threatened the steel-stilted lighthouses sufficiently to bring an order for keepers to abandon stations

2 More Tankers On Way Will Boost Total Receipts to 2,436,000 Gallons

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

This area's gloomy fuel outlook brightened yesterday—at least temporarily—when two barges reached here with more than a million gallons of fuel oil for homes.

Fuel Oil Coordinator J. Thomas Kennedy said plans have been made to provide oil from District emergency stocks for L. F. Steuart & Bro., which serves an estimated 22 per cent of the District's homes.

That firm, said Kennedy, is the only local supplier whose stocks are exhausted.

A fuel barge, he said, was due to leave Norfolk last night with the 735,000 gallons of oil loaned to the District Wednesday by the Navy. Kennedy said 300,000 gallons of this would go into the District's "pool," and the remainder would be distributed by the Steuart Company.

Gasoline Shortage Looms

"I am much relieved," said Kennedy, whose office has been deluged by calls for fuel. "We're getting oil to the people who need it. We think this pressure is going to level off, at least temporarily, by the first of the month when the new allocations come in."

Another possible fuel "crisis," however, appeared on the horizon yesterday—the likelihood of a gasoline shortage.

One of this area's largest gasoline and oil suppliers said yesterday that the gasoline situation here is "exceptionally tight." At present, he said, "we have enough stock to meet requirements, but this could change in two or three days.

"Our immediate concern is to keep people warm, and we're sending in fuel oil barges at the expense of gasoline."

Fire Dept. Shops Around

District Purchasing Officer Roland M. Brennan disclosed yesterday that Wednesday night he found he could not get 4000 needed gallons of gasoline for the Fire Department from the Petrol Corp., which holds a contract for the District government's supply.

Brennan said he tried several other suppliers before getting the gasoline from an undisclosed company. The Petrol Corp., which previously announced it would be

Snow Expected Tonight; Cold Respite Is Brief

Washington, which yesterday enjoyed a brief "heat wave" when the mercury rose above freezing for the first time in a week, is in for more cold weather today, the Weather Bureau forecast, with snow or sleet tonight or tomorrow.

The temperature rose to 36 at 2:50 p. m. yesterday before beginning to subside into the low 20s during the night. Cloudy, with a high temperature near 28 degrees is forecast for today.

Yesterday's low came at 12:48 a. m. when the temperature sank to 17 degrees above, with suburban areas reporting slightly lower temperatures.

In the 6800 block of C st., Seat Pleasant, Md., an 8-inch water main that broke about 10:30 p. m. Wednesday flooded several basements, putting furnaces out of operation, and resulted in water for a dozen houses in the block being turned off and closing of the street to traffic until its repair yesterday forenoon. Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission workmen said the break might have been caused by freezing.

George Priddy, District water division dispatcher, said as many as 20 requests a day by homeowners to have water shut off because of broken water pipes have been received during the past 10 days.

Coast Guard cutters and tenders were also busy keeping open the shipping lanes up the bay from Baltimore to the mouth of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal.

The Maryland State Roads Commission said yesterday that snow had been cleared from all principal highways, and that some secondary roads still are packed with snow and ice but are open.

Records at the Baltimore Weather Bureau showed that minimum temperatures had been below freezing for 15 straight days, the longest period since the winter of 1940.

U. N. Approves Jewish Militia For Palestine

Aid Would Be Given Arabs in Organizing Force in Their Area

Lake Success, Jan. 29 (AP).—The United Nations Palestine Commission agreed tonight to help organize immediately a Jewish-controlled militia in the Holy Land.

The five-nation body decided to accept an offer of the Jewish Agency to take the lead in forming such a force. It would back up the U. N. partition plan.

The commission agreed also that it would cooperate with Palestine Arabs if they offered to set up a militia in the proposed new Arab country.

Senator Vicente J. Francisco, Philippines delegate, was directed to begin negotiation at once with British authorities on problems connected with organizing the militia.

The militia would be formed between now and the termination of the British mandate, tentatively scheduled for May 15. A Jewish Agency memorandum proposed a force of 30,000 to 35,000 men.

A U. N. spokesman who attended the closed session said the Jewish memorandum was taken as a basis for discussion but not all points were accepted.

Informed quarters said Senator Francisco would take up at least two major points here with British representative Sir Alexander Cadogan:

Cutter Plows To Aid of 3 Light Crews

By Charles Yarbrough
Post Reporter

Aboard the Coast Guard Cutter Madrona, Jan. 29.—The Madrona, a busy buoy tender from balmier climes, crunched through Potomac ice today to send eight marooned lighthouse keepers on a vacation.

But emergency lights, rigged for more than 10 days' operation, still blinked out across the desolate, polar-like river at dusk, marking the channel for Washington-bound oil barges, which make up the choked river's only traffic.

It marked the first time in at least seven years that piled-up ice has threatened the steel-stilted lighthouses sufficiently to bring an order that keepers abandon their stations. They are given 10 days' leave.

For the thick-skinned Madrona with its ice-breaker bow, it was "collateral duty." Originally sent into the Norfolk-Quantico-Washington area to repair and replace damaged buoys, the sturdy 180-foot craft has broken the way for two oil-laden barges and towed them in to alleviate the District's fuel-oil shortage. Yesterday, while on its stranded lighthouse keeper mission, it had a request to stand by for another possible tow request.

A few months ago, she was tending buoys in Miami.

Subpena Servers Seek in Vain for 2 Union Men There

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, ordered by President Truman to end the 25-day-old Government cafeteria strike, conferred in his office yesterday with top officials of the striking union for 90 minutes.

Throughout the day United States marshals were attempting to serve congressional subpenas on two men attending the meeting but were unable to locate them.

Present were Richard A. Bancroft, president of local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO) and Oliver T. Palmer, business agent and chief negotiator for the local, who are wanted for testimony before a House Labor Subcommittee.

Alfred Bernstein, United Public Workers attorney, and Assistant Secretary of Labor John Gibson were also present at the session. The group discussed issues in the strike, but a Labor Department spokesman said no immediate action was contemplated as a result.

Schwellenbach revealed last night that he had urged the two men to accept Hoffman's subpena and appear on the hill to testify.

The Secretary said: "When they

Thousands of Cases Behind

Municipal Court Judges to Discuss Proposals For Speeding Docket With D. C. Bar Group

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

The judges of Municipal Court will discuss their lagging docket this afternoon with a District Bar Association committee of 16 headed by Attorney John L. Laskey.

Alarmed over the way cases were piling up in the court, the bar committee several months ago began a study of conditions, to find out what was wrong and what could be done to bring the docket up to date.

For years more and more cases have been filed in the court and a great many have piled up, waiting to be tried. At the end of last month there were about 700 of these which involved from $500 to $3000 (Class A actions), another 200 which involved from $50 to $500 (Class B actions) and about 400 criminal cases for which jury trials were asked. The jam of cases both caused and made worse the slowing up of the thousands of smaller cases—many of them involving only a few dollars—that the judges take care of every month.

The Municipal Court hears all the small cases here. These courts must act promptly, Chief Justice Hughes once said, because, while few probably can afford to wait for justice, the poor who find themselves in court can afford it least.

Chief Judge George P. Barse of the Municipal Court has from time to time expressed concern over the trend toward delay and has put through a number of reforms to speed up the work.

Among these have been an assignment office, to send cases to judges ready to hear them and thus cut down waiting time, and a system of reports for use in making posals haven't a change, Cox supported instead the Doughton substitute. The Doughton proposals patterened after Knutson's, would cut taxes an estimated four to five billion dollars.

Democratic Forces Rallied To Plan Substitute Tax Bill

Cox hinted such a bill might not collidge with a veto

From the Democratic Party's other extreme case a charge by Representative Dingell that the Knutson bill is "a discriminatory patchwork of political expediency" that would plunge the Nation in the red. Dingell, House sponsor of the President's plan, said Mr. Truman's proposals provide "greater relief to the average American family . . . without booty for the favored few," and without endangering the Nation's credit.

Fears Profiteering

Calling for reimposition of the excess profits tax on corporations, he said: "Profiteering in peace can be as dangerous to the economy as is profiteering in war. The Nation needs protection now from profiteering."

Representative Jere Cooper (D., Tenn.) who cast his vote in committee for the President's plan, hit the 6.5 billion cost to the Treasury of the Knutson bill and challenged Republican claims that they can cut spending deep enough to avoid a deficit. He told the House that five hard-to-cut items—defense, veterans' benefits, international affairs, interest on the debt and tax refunds—make up four fifths of the President's 39.7-billion-dollar budget, and warned:

"Every dollar we take off international affairs will have to be put on national defense."

Taber for Deep Cut

House Appropriations Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) however, insisted Congress could cut 4½ billion dollars from the President's budget.

Replying to a query by Knutson, Taber said Congress could cut three billion "easily." He said an additional 1.5 billion, for programs Congress hasn't yet authorized, can be trimmed from spending "if Congress stands up and cuts where it should."

Doughton, ranking Ways and Means Democrat, and first to balk at the President's plan, told reporters he will take the floor today. He reiterated his belief that Congress should cut taxes about four billion dollars without reimposition of the excess profits tax.

A group of Southern Democrats from six States, however, called on Democratic Leader Rayburn and urged inclusion of the excess profits tax in any motion to recommit. This group, led by Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.), included members from Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Georgia and Kentucky.

Meanwhile, the marshal's office subpenaed Ethel Thompson, whom F. Albert Reiman, staff member of the House subcommittee, identified as a receptionist at the union local headquarters at 1015 M st. nw. Bernstein said the woman was unknown to union officials.

Bernstein branded the subcommittee as a strike-breaking unit. In a statement last night, he declared that although the general counsels of the Labor Department and the National Labor Relations Board had declared the filing of anti-Communist affidavits was not a prerequisite for collective bargaining, "the committee is utilizing all the techniques of a witch-hunt in order to hide the illegal and strike-breaking actions of GSI." The GSI management has refused to negotiate until the affidavits are filed.

Reiman said the committee, headed by Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.), will resume hearings on the dispute between the 1500 workers and Government Services, Inc., operators of 42 eating places, on Monday at 10 a. m.

In other developments on the strike front:

A warrant was issued by Judge Harry Thomas in the Arlington County Courthouse yesterday morning for the arrest of James Lawson of 2212 13th st. nw., charged with felonious assault with a dangerous weapon on Albert Harper of Woodbridge, Va., a picket at Arlington Farms. No one was injured.

The warrant was not served after it was discovered Arlington Farms comes under the jurisdiction of the City of Alexandria. Bernstein said the picket would swear out a warrant there this morning.

He emphasized that no official conclusion has been reached that the controls should be put into operation immediately if Congress authorizes them.

The Assistant Secretary of Agriculture urged Congress to broaden and approve the bill sponsored by Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) to provide for meat-rationing machinery. He said it would take four months at least to get the program into operation. Rent Control Warnings

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) served warning yesterday that the Democrats will make housing and rent control issues in the 1948 elections unless Congress takes satisfactory action at this session.

He, Mayor William O'Dwyer (.), of New York, and Mayor Hubert Humphrey (D.), of Minneapolis testified yesterday on rent control before a Senate Banking and Currency subcommittee.

O'Dwyer urged the extension of rent controls for two years because at the rate at which new housing is being provided, "it is clear that the emergency will continue for at least another two years."

Humphrey called upon Congress to abandon "the half-heated and apologetic approach to rent control legislation.

He asked Congress to extend rent control for two years and put teeth into the law.

serious during the next few months."

This shortage, he said, "jeopardizes the national security and welfare of the United States" and then added "that there is no prospect that such critical shortage may soon be remedied by an increase in the available supply without additional Government action."

While the President's message was being read in the House, Wolcott's office issued a statement saying that Secretary of Agriculture Anderson was told last month that the present restrictions on grain use by distillers would not be renewed.

Wolcott added that "as long as the European countries to which we are sending grain make whisky of that grain instead of feeding it to hungry people, it is nonsensical to continue the program."

Stocks at Prewar Level

President Truman's message said that approximately 59 million bushels of grain were used for making beverage alcohol by distillers in the last fiscal year. Much, he said, had been used to build up liquor stocks depleted by heavy demands during the war years.

The stocks of whisky on hand now are approximately equal to the stocks which were normally on hand prior to the war, Mr. Truman told Congress.

"Due to the present greatly increased sale of blended whisky the stocks represent a six-year supply even at the present high rate of consumption.

"No additional buildup in stocks, therefore, is justified and the industry can withstand a substantial depletion of its present stocks without undue hardship."

Mr. Truman warned that this country may not meet its famine-export goal of 500 million bushels of grain this year without drastic conservation measures such as a compulsory cut in use of grains by the whisky makers.

The Chief Executive pointed out that because of devastation "brought about by the war and extremely unfavorable weather conditions, the grain situation of most European countries is extremely grave."

He referred to voluntary agreements being undertaken with brewers and other industrial users of grain to reduce consumption, and added that efforts to arrange similar agreements with liquor makers had failed. The result, he said, was that he felt "called upon to recommend to the Congress the granting of authority for mandatory control."

New Cold Air Sweeps Down On Northeast

Chicago, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—A subzero cold wave tore down on the Northeastern States today, threatening further shutdowns in industries which already had laid off 282,300 workers because of fuel shortages.

The cold will hit the great industrial arc extending from Michigan through Pennsylvania, New York and New England tomorrow.

A blizzard which preceded the cold swept into west central New York, closing highways and stalling freight trains. Watertown, N. Y., was buried under a 10-inch snowfall.

The North Central States enjoyed generally mild weather but the fuel situation still was serious.

The most serious industrial shutdowns and productions cutbacks were in Detroit automotive plants and Pittsburgh steel and coal-mining industries. Detroit was expected to lose production of an estimated 15,000 passenger cars and trucks for the workweek ending tomorrow.

About 200,000 were idle in the Detroit area; 30,800 in Ohio, where eastern cities also were threatened with electric power failure; 20,000 in the Pittsburgh area, and 1700 in the Buffalo, N. Y., area.

Max W. Ball, Interior Department fuel expert, said at Washington that Americans by the thousands are canceling orders for home-use oil burners. Ball told a House committee that despite efforts to save fuel he sees "little chance" that demand for petroleum will fall to the level of supply.

450,000 Gallons of Oil Barge In . . .

The Washington Post

"FILL 'ER UP"—At the Rosslyn dock of the American Oil Co., John Hymers (right), assistant plant supervisor, prepares to connect a hose and pump 450,000 gallons of fuel oil from a barge which arrived yesterday in time to ease the District's fuel crisis. The tugboat Dottie Dee (background), aided by a Coast Guard icebreaker, crunched in with the barge and completed the battle with the river which began early this week when the craft was icebound near Morgantown, Md. Ready to assist Hymers are Dale Munson (left), pumper, and Oliver Lettmann, supervisor of pumping tanks. Barge also has 125,000 gallons of kerosene in which Fleming reported partial conversion to coal of one Justice Department plant which had used 400,000 gallons of fuel oil annually.

completely out of fuel oil by February 1, refused comment on the gasoline request.

A barge loaded with 450,000 gallons of home fuel oil and 125,000 gallons of kerosene broke free of the Potomac River's ice to reach the American Oil Co. dock at Rosslyn yesterday.

Barge Due Today

Another barge, consigned to the Standard Oil Co., arrived with 580,000 gallons of fuel oil. A second Standard Oil barge, with 546,000 gallons of vitally needed heavy oil, for use in hospitals, apartment houses and similar buildings, is due today, making total receipts of 2,436,000 gallons.

Standard Oil said it expects a barge with 14,000 barrels of gasoline tomorrow and the following day a barge with 10,000 barrels of gasoline and 4000 barrels of kerosene.

Three Coast Guard ice-breakers have now been assigned to the Potomac area, Fuel Oil Coordinator Kennedy said, and all officials highly praised the aid of the Coast Guard in the fuel oil crisis.

Most important present need, said Kennedy, is maintenance of the 15-per-cent cut in fuel oil use through conservation efforts.

Between 250 and 300 calls for fuel were received yesterday at his offices in the Municipal Center, Kennedy said, most of the pleas coming from Steuart's customers. After 4 p. m., when arrangements were completed to aid the firm, the Steuart consumers were referred to the company.

Kennedy said suburban police were doing a good job of checking on emergency calls for oil. In response to one "plea" from Alexandria, he said, police there found the caller had two 275-gallon tanks of fuel oil on hand, containing a total of 400 gallons. "That's why we try to check every call," said Kennedy.

In line with reduced oil consumption, John R. Steelman, aide to President Truman, yesterday wrote to Rep. John W. Heselton (R., Mass.) that efforts are under way to convert some Government building from use of oil to coal heating.

Steelman enclosed a letter from Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Agency Administrator,

Traffic Lights Planned to Guide Salmon to the Sea

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—A state aquatic biologist is wondering if salmon can be guided back to the sea with traffic lights.

A system has been rigged up which Donald H. Fry, jr., hopes will guide young fish on their way down the San Joaquin river and through the Golden Gate into the Pacific.

The tiny salmon naturally follow the current downstream to continue their life cycle in salt water. But near Mendota, the fish men noted last year, they ganged up at an irrigation ditch entrance where the flow was more evident to a fish than in the main river.

On the theory that fish are attracted by light, biologist Fry and his assistants have fixed up a belt of five lights. It will move slowly over the 110-foot canal mouth—in the direction of the river's flow.

Charter Flights for Mexicans Cancelled After Air Crash

Fresno, Cal., Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Chartered airline flights for the deportation of Mexican nationals were canceled tonight as immigration officials sought to identify the bodies of 32 persons killed in the crash of a twin-engined DC-3 plane near Coalinga, yesterday.

Irving Wixon, of the U. S. Immigration Service, said a similar charter flight of deported Mexican citizens scheduled to leave Oakland, Calif., for Texas today had been called off on orders from Philadelphia.

At Washington, chairman Charles A. Wolverton of the House Commerce Committee demanded to know why the plane carried so many passengers. He said the normal seating complement of a DC-3 is 21 passengers.

Puerto Ricans' Plane Forced Down on Island

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Ten Puerto Ricans, stranded here Monday when their plane en route from New York to San Juan was grounded by the Civil Aeronautics Administration on 19 counts of unfitness, left today aboard another chartered craft.

Their second plane, however, was forced down on the tiny island of South Caicos, 400 miles northwest of San Juan, when one engine failed, the CAA reported.

U. S. Unlikely to Up Tariff Against Franc

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Treasury Department officials yesterday discounted current reports that the United States tariff law would cancel out French gains expected from the devaluation of the franc.

Foreign trade experts in Washington and Paris pointed out earlier this week that American laws demand that a special tariff be imposed whenever a foreign country attempts to subsidize exports. The additional tarif is "countervailing"—equal in amount to the subsidy.

These sources raised the point that the mechanics of the devaluation, and the provisions which now pertain to French exportsers, might be considered as a subsidy.

At the Bureau of the Customs, however, officials in charge of applying the countervailing duty said no question has yet been raised on the French move.

And Frank A. Southard, jr., director of the Treasury Department's Office of International Finance, pointed out that no penalty duties had been imposed in the case of imports from Italy, where a somewhat similar exchange regulation benefits Italian exporters.

Under the new French currency provisions, exporters who sell for dollars receive half of their proceeds at the "official" rate of 214 francs to the dollar. For the other half, however, they receive the "free market" rate, about 330 to the dollar.

The question is whether this advantage—half pay at the free market rate— is a "bounty or grant" to the exporters. It can be argued that it permits French exporters to sell their goods more cheaply in this country than if they were obliged to receive their pay entirely at the official rate.

In the past, Customs Bureau officials said they have placed a rather extensive and inclusive construction on any monetary plan of a foreign government that enables its exporters to sell their goods more cheaply here. In those cases they have applied offsetting tariffs.

The law states that "whenever any country shall pay or bestow directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the manufacture or production or export of any article produced in such country," then upon its importation here, "there shall be levied and paid in all such cases, in addition to the duties otherwise imposed in this Act, an additional duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant."

Pressure Possible

If the Treasury does not act to impose the countervailing duty, it was pointed out, American manufacturers or their Congressmen might appeal for action—particularly if their business was being hurt by the imports.

But Southard said yesterday that in a previous review of the Italian situation, with somewhat similar exchange regulations for exporters, Treasury legal opinion was that the arrangement was not a "direct subsidy."

He conceded that in a depression period, manufacturers might exert pressure to have an offsetting tariff levied. But at the moment, he said, American manufacturers seemed to have no difficulty in selling their wares.

For a year, he added, while the Italian arrangements has been in effect, there has been "never a peep" from American business interests.

He said that there is no disposition by the Government to try to discourage the French export effort; and that the effort, in fact, was to the contrary.

One of the chief objectives of the French devaluation was, of course, to stimulate French exports, particularly to America, the biggest potential market.

Curbs Planned on Tin For Beer, Other Cans

Curbs on the use of tin for beer, coffee, paint, oil and pet food are expected to be announced today.

But officials of the Commerce Department, which makes the rules, said they wouldn't go into effect until February 29—and they may not be imposed even then.

The reason is that the department's power to control the use of tin expires February 29 and Congress has not shown any hurry to renew it.

Official Denies 'Packing' Mission

Health Insurance Ideas Didn't Influence Selection, Cohen Tells Senate Committee

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Wilbur J. Cohen, assistant chief of the Social Security Administration's research bureau, yesterday denied a "conspiracy" to pack a mission to Tokyo with adherents of a particular philosophy of health insurance.

Donnell

Cohen told a Senate Labor Subcommittee that the mission had been organized at the "insistence of the War Department and against the desires of his own agency.

He "categorically" denied a suggestion of Senator Donnell (R., Mo.) that the mission had been made up of people who shared his own views on health legislation.

Donnell showed that two of three persons originally recommended by Cohen for the mission had been at the time on the staff of Dr. I. S. Falk, Cohen's chief, and an advocate of compulsory insurance. Cohen retorted that this fact had nothing to do with their selection, which was based on experience in the health insurance field and their availability for duty in Japan. It was always difficult, he pointed out, to find qualified people willing to accept oversea service.

Dr. Searon Sits In

At Donnell's elbow throughout the day sat Dr. Marjorie Shearon, a registered lobbyist who for some three months before last June 30 was an employe of the committee at $9050 a year. In a statement filed with the clerks of both houses, Dr. Shearon described herself as "self-employed as consultant, writer and lecturer." Her answer to a question about pay was:

"I have not been paid anything. When and if the number of subscriptions to my releases warrants it, I shall take a reasonable salary for my work. Thus far I have given my services in the public interest." The statement was filed December 31, 1947.

In a financial statement filed the same day and covering the time since July 1, 1947, Dr. Shearon listed income from "sale of subscriptions to 'American Medicine and the Political Scene' and sale of publications" as $12,311.41 for the six months. Expenses during the same period for printing, office rent, clerical hire and the like were listed as totaling $6626.44, or $5684.97 less than income for the six months.

Publisher of Pamphlets

Dr. Shearon described "American Medicine and the Political Scene" as a "weekly analytical release." She added that she also had published pamphlets including "Blueprint for Nationalization—Plans to Enchain Medicine by Unwarranted Regulative Interference" and "Federal Prop for the Welfare State."

Cohen said no question of "conspiracy" or "plot" in organizing the Tokyo mission had arisen until such charges appeared in Dr. Shearon's "confidential" publications. He added that confidence in public servants had been injured by "personal vilification and attribution of evil motives."

Everyone at Social Security, he said, was "afraid to put anything down on paper because Mrs. Shearon would get hold of it and distort it." That, he added, "is not conducive to efficiency."

The subcommittee is considering legislation to establish health insurance financed by a 1½ per cent payroll tax on employers and employes alike. Its authors are Senator Murray and Senator Wagner

AFL Predicts Strike Wave From Taft Act

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—The AFL executive council today issued a new blast at the Taft-Hartley Act and its supporters, and said the Nation is in for a wave of costly strikes when contract negotiations come up in approaching months.

"America is now experiencing a lull before the storm," the council said in a statement. "When present collective bargaining contracts expire, the most difficult period in the history of labor relations in this country threatens to ensue.

"The signs are unmistakable. Perhaps the most dramatic instance to date has been the experience of the International Typographical Union in attempting to negotiate new contracts with publishers during recent weeks."

Secretary-Treasurer George Meany reported the federation's membership had increased 18,000 in the past four months, to a grand total of more than 7,800,000. However, John L. Lewis and his 600,000 United Mine Workers "disaffiliated" in December, knocking down the total membership of the AFL to 7,200,000, Green said.

Peace Depends on Full Aid, Truman Asserts

questioner asked whether he would comment "on the campaign on the hill to knock $2,300,000,000 off the Marshall Plan."

To get ready to put the Marshall Plan into effect it is absolutely essential to fill the pipelines, the President answered.

"Taking that amount off might tend to make it a relief program instead of a recovery program?" he was asked.

Yes, the President said, and there must be a recovery program.

Truman Deeply Stirred

Asked whether he thought the $6,800,000,000 was essential, the President launched into an impromptu speech, with every sign that he was deeply stirred.

He first answered by saying that the full amount was absolutely essential; the program must be approved as a whole over a period long enough to assure recovery in Europe.

Next he recalled that the program had been worked on by the 16 nations that met in Paris last summer, and by the entire executive branch of the Government.

Going back to August, 1945, just after the Japanese surrender, he reminded his questioners that he had then made a rescission of 55 billion dollars of war appropriations, with a further rescission of more than seven billion the following January.

"All or Nothing"

At that time, he said, the appropriation for war in a single fiscal year was 103 billion dollars. It did seem to him, the President said with feeling, that the country could afford to risk 17 billion dollars for peace over a four-year period.

It seemed to him a very sane expenditure for peace. And he added that the welfare of the world and the welfare of the Nation demanded it.

"You said we must have the whole program or there's no use in starting," a questioner remarked.

That's absolutely correct, the President replied—all or nothing.

"Does that mean you would reject a bill if it should be less than $6,800,000,000 in authorization?" he was asked.

Continuing Program Desired

The President said he wanted a continuing program, not just a year-to-year relief program. The total cost might not be 17 billion dollars if Europe recovers faster than expected, he went on, and Europe made great advances during the past year.

He said actual appropriations could be discussed from year to year as they came along. As for administering the program, he said he had no objection to the plan proposed by the Brookings Institution at the request of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It's all right with me, he told a questioner, and there's no difference except over small details.

The Brookings plan would set up a new Government agency, with an administrator of Cabinet rank and an advisory board. The State Department would have no veto power over the administrator's decisions, but could always have recourse to the President in case of a dispute involving foreign policy.

Battle Over Cost Continues

Although the Brookings Plan appeared yesterday to have settled the long wrangle over administering the ERP, the battle over the cost continued on Capitol Hill.

The World Bank's estimates were made public as a sequel to President John J. McCloy's testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on January 16. At that time McCloy said that the Bank's technical staff, made up of economists from several countries, had found the $6,800,000,000 figure to be "a rather tight fit." Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg then asked to submit the Bank's data for comparative purposes.

Yesterday, in response to this request, McCloy reported the Bank's belief that Europe's imports in the first year would be between 350 and 400 million dollars less than the Administration's figures, and its exports almost 600 million dollars less. The smaller export figure was based, in part, on the fear that existing import restrictions would check the sale of Europe's products abroad.

Moreover, the Bank did not believe that other Western Hemisphere countries would be able to finance 700 million dollars worth of help to Europe in the first 15 months, as the Administration had estimated. For these and other reasons, McCloy wrote, Vandenberg, Europe's needs would be greater than the Administration estimated, and the amount requested of Congress was "conservative."

50 Shiploads With Arms, Aid Reach Greece

Athens, Greece, Jan. 29 (U.P.)—Maj. Gen. William G. Livesay, chief of the United States Military Mission in Greece, said today 50 shiploads of American arms and supplies had arrived at Greek ports and the national army now is equipped for a successful offensive against the guerillas.

The national army, as now equipped, "is superior in every respect" to the rebel forces, Livesay said.

Livesay said more than 90,000 tons of equipment had arrived in Greece as of January 20, and more than 100 million dollars of the alloted 159 million dollars for military aid had been "obligated" by the end of 1947.

Sixteen more American officers left Athens for field service in northern Greece as advisers to the Greek national army. Three others will leave tomorrow.

In a disturbance here police shot and killed Haralambos Panagpoulos, Communist section chief known as "Captain Black," after surrounding the house in which he was hiding.

Outbreaks were reported in five scattered areas of northern Greece, and nearly 70 guerillas were said to have been killed in the clashes.

Coast Guard Presses Search for Plane

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—United States Coast Guard headquarters said today that search is continuing for a two-engined Coast Guard plane which has been missing since January 24. The plane with a crew of four was en route from Newark, N. J., to Washington, but had been rerouted when unable to land at the National Airport because of the snowstorm.

Dissenting Report on Clegg Case Made Public

Moran, who is a member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. The three accused policemen were acquitted.

However, in the case of the arresting policeman, Pvt. John G. Gibboney, 34, of First Precinct Station, Moran came up with a minority opinion that Gibboney was guilty of illegal arrest and detention, and should be warned.

Moran pointed out that the complaint of a molester in the vicinity of 13th and E nw. did not—"as every police officer knows or should know"—charge the commission of a felony so as to justify an arrest without a warrant.

"It (the complaint) charged only a misdemeanor," Moran stated. "For such an offense, of course, the officer could not legally make an arrest without a warrant, unless the misdemeanor was committed in his presence."

But, Moran added, according to Gibboney's official version of the incident and accordnig to testimony developed at the hearing, no misdemeanor or any crime at all was committed in the presence of the arresting officer, Gibboney. What happened, said Moran, was this:

" . . . The officer stationed himself on the rear steps of the fire escape of the Palace Theater on 13th st., and about 6 a. m. he observed a light-skinned colored man, similar in description to the individual mentioned in the complaint. This colored man, later identified as Clegg, walked south on the east sidewalk of the street. He stopped a minute or so and then walked very rapidly to the west side of 13th st.

Woman Began to Run

"About that time a woman was walking south on the west sidewalk of the 500 block of 13th st. and just as this woman was about half way between F and E sts., Clegg crossed to the west sidewalk of 13th st. and came up behind her. He made no effort to pass the woman and when he was immediately behind her she began to run, and according to the officer's written report of the incident, Clegg then increased the speed of his walk."

The woman—Mrs. Viola Haynes, 19, of 1706 F st. nw.—told the trial board she was serving as a lure in a police trap to catch the man who had molested her earlier in the week. She testified that she did not see or hear Clegg do anything wrong, but that she became frightened and broke into a run. She and another woman who had been molested earlier that week, Mrs. Ethel Click Owens of 150 12th st. ne., testified that Clegg did not look like their accoster.

Clegg, Moran pointed out, was arrested for "investigation" on an open charge. Clegg was booked at 6:40 a. m. of August 2, and by 8 p. m. that day he had been put through a routine police lineup and interrogated by the sex squad. Yet he was not released until 5 p. m. the next day.

Once the sex squad had finished questioning Clegg, Moran insisted, it was Gibboney's duty and obligation "to show the necessity for further detention of his prisoner or to release him promptly."

Warning Only Advised

In view of Private Gibboney's "fine reputation," Moran suggested that a warning be the only penalty imposed.

"Such a warning would undoubtedly serve its purpose," Moran said. "It would put this officer, as well as others, on notice that they must be more careful in the future. It would also give assurance to the public that the Police Department is just as much interested in protecting the innocent citizens as it is in apprehending the guilty."

Chief of Police Barrett, who had testified at the police trial and had urged exoneration of all three accused on all counts, took issue with the dissenting opinion, in sending the trial board proceedings to the Commissioners.

The superintendent of police repeated his declaration before the trial board—that Private Gibboney had prevented "assault with intent to rape," and therefore had reasonable ground to believe a felony was about to be committed when he arrested Clegg. No other witness offered any evidence to support the chief's assertion.

Barrett Defends Policy

In his comment to the Commissioners, Major Barrett defended Gibboney's holding Clegg for 34 hours on the grounds that Mrs. Owens, who had been accosted the previous week, was out of town and would not return until Monday morning, when she could be called to the police station to see if she could identify Clegg. The major did not explain why Clegg was released at 5 p. m. Sunday when the witness was not expected until Monday morning.

The police superintendent concluded:

"If there had been a conviction in this case, it would have caused a demoralizing effect upon the personnel of the department . . .

"In the absence of directives to the contrary, this department will continue to make arrests upon probable cause where they have reasonable grounds to believe that a felony has been, or is about to be, committed."

U. S. Seeks to Uphold May, Garsson Verdicts

The Justice Department yesterday asked the United States Court of Appeals to uphold the convictions of former Representative Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) and Henry and Murray Garsson on fraud and bribery charges.

It filed a 122-page brief answering the contention of May and the Garsson brothers that they did not get a fair trial.

A Federal jury convicted the trio last summer. They are now free on bond pending appeal.

Congress Quartet To Be Heard Tonight

The Republican Congressional Quartet has top billing on an all barber shop harmony program at 8 o'clock this evening at the Statler Hotel.

Purpose of the song fest, to which all members of Congress and their staffs have been invited, is to "Keep America Singing." Making up the all-star Republican quartet are Representatives Arends (R., Ill.), top tenor; Towe (R., N. J.), lead; Tibbott (R., Pa.), baritone, and Fellows (R., Me.), bass.

Five Aides Are Promoted In Corporation Counsel Jobs

Promotions for five assistants in the office of the District corporation counsel were approved yesterday by the Commissioners.

John J. Donnelly, jr., 29, will move up from a $4275-a-year job to take the $5905-a-year post formerly held by Irving Bryan, who last August became personal assistant to the corporation counsel in charge of all District legislation.

Donnelly will be assigned to handle court cases, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said.

Henry E. Wixon, 29, will take over Donnelly's current court case assignments with no increase in his $4149-a-year salary.

Chalfonte Gets Post

Wixon's present assignment at Municipal Court will be taken over by Robert C. Chalfonte, 31, who will receive a salary increase from $3522 to $4149 per year.

Robert F. Kneipp, 36, will move up from his present $3397-a-year job to a newly-created $4149-a-year post covering the handling of contracts.

Philip Noel Brophy, 28, will advance from his current $2644-a-year job to the position vacated by Kneipp. West said Brophy may be assigned to Municipal Court.

These advancements in rank will leave two vacancies in the lower echelons of the department, West revealed. He said he plans in the near future to appoint new assistant corporation counsels to fill the posts, which carry salaries of $2645 and $3397 per year respectively.

Took Job in 1944

Donnelly joined the city legal staff in June, 1944, after working in private law practice with the firm of William E. Leahy and serving on the legal staff of the Department of Justice's Naturalization Service.

He attended George Washington University here and graduated from Columbia University law school in 1941. He was admitted to the District Bar in January, 1942.

Donnelly lives with his wife, Josephine, and three children at 3921 Fulton st. nw.

Carol Drake's favorite ways to cook chicken

Did you ever think of the many mouth-watering dishes that you can make with stewing hens? Below are some of our tested favorites for your taste approval.

FRICASSEED CHICKEN

Cut chicken in pieces, roll in flour and brown well in hot shortening. Cover with boiling water add salt, pepper, chopped onion, parsley and celery leaves; cover and simmer until tender, about 2 hours. Add more hot water if necessary. Thicken liquid and serve over chicken.

SMOTHERED CHICKEN

Brown chicken as directed above, then place in casserole or baking pan. Add enough milk to half cover chicken, cover pan or dish and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until chicken is tender, about 2 hours.

CHICKEN CURRY

Brown chicken as directed above. Cover with boiling water, add small chopped onion, celery and 1 tbsp. curry powder with seasonings. Cook as for Fricasseed Chicken.

CHICKEN PIE

Cut chicken, place in large kettle and cover with boiling water, add 1 tbsp. salt and cook covered until tender, about 2 to 2½ hours. Cool, remove meat from bones. Measure 1½ cups of broth and combine with 1 cup milk and ½ cup milk, 5 tbsp. flour and seasonings to taste. Add flour mixture to broth and cook until thickened, about 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Add chicken, 1 cup cooked peas and 1 cup cooked carrots; and simmer until thoroughly heated. Pour into heated casserole, top with biscuit rounds and bake in hot oven (450° F.) 15 minutes or until biscuits are lightly browned.

up new and more efficient schedules.

However, as Washington has grown larger and business has gone back to its peace-time level, the Municipal Court has been beset by a rising flood of new cases. There were 108,171 cases filed in the year that ended June 30, 1946, and 125,570 began in the year ending June 30, 1947. That was an increase of over 16 per cent. During the last six months there has been another increase, which may be as high as 20 per cent. The increase has been heaviest in the types of cases that take most time.

Number of Judges the Same

But while their job has been getting bigger and harder, the number of municipal judges—ten has remained the same. This does not mean that there always is a force of ten judges on the bench, either. Sickness, vacations, Saturday afternoons, Sundays and holidays off all reduce bench time.

The death of Judge Nathan R. Margold on December 15 reduced the bench to nine. Nomination of Frank H. Myers to succeed Margold is awaiting Senate confirmation.

A bill to add three judges to the Municipal Court was offered in Congress last year, but was laid aside and so far has not been brought up at this session.

Short of giving the court more judges, there are a number of possible remiedies being talked about in the present situation.

Might Step up Pace

Some gain might come from better scheduling of the work, stepping up the pace of the assignment office, so as to have each judge hear a few more cases a day, on the average. The total, for 10 judges in a month, would be considerable.

However, this gain would come among the smaller, shorter cases—which are not the worst part of the docket—and no such speeding up could be achieved in the longer cases, which are dragging behind the most now.

Some speed might be added by giving up, for the present, the practice of rotating judges among the various branches of the court — criminal, civil, small claims, landlord and tenant, and the like. They might handle a little more work if they stuck to the branches they know best.

No Criminal Work to Raedy

The change is already partly in effect. Judge Barse has handled civil cases for over a year. Judge Ellen K. Raedy has not taken her turn in criminal court since she forfeited $200 on a traffic charge last summer.

The straight assignment plan, however, is viewed only as an emergency step. Most courts find it better to rotate their assignments.

The court could—in effect—add two judges to its bench by borrowing two members of the Municipal Court of Appeals. This has been tried before, and a backlog of cases was cleared up. It is being suggested again in this emergency.

There is the objection to this plan that the Municipal Court of Appeals has a job of its own to do, and a docket to keep up to date. There would be no gain in speeding up the municipal docket if it meant causing a jam in appeals.

Holiday on Vacations Could Help

Some gain in the Municipal Court would come, too, by having the 10 judges give up all vacations, except in emergencies, until the docket is up to date.

These and other measures doubtless will be discussed by the judges and lawyers at today's conference.

Those scheduled to meet with the bar committee today are Chief Judge Barse, and Judges Raedy, —ohn P. McMahon, Armond W. Scott, Walter J. Casey, George D. Neilson, Aubrey B. Fennell, Thomas Dewey Quinn and Nadine Lane Gallagher.

Besides Chairman Laskey, the members of the Bar Association committee on relations with the Municipal Court are:

More Veterans Tell of Deals With Williams

Seven more veterans testified in District Court yesterday that George H. Williams accepted $500-to-$1000 deposits from them after promising to build homes that could be financed by GI loans.

The Veterans' Administration's Washington area loan officer, however, told the court that Williams, a real esate man now in bankruptcy, never applied for nor received Government approval for the houses he promised.

Williams is on trial on charges of using the mails to promote a scheme for defrauding veterans and of sending forged checks in interstate commerce. The trial enters its fourth day this morning.

Veterans testifying they made the deposits were Van Buren Sillins, jr., Riverdale, Md.; Keller J. Reece, 3 Adams st. nw.; Joseph B. Rathburn, 4232 14th st. nw.; James C. Aldridge, Defense Heights, Md.; Wayland J Coston, 4835 Van Ness st. nw.; William Durding, Silver Spring, Md., and Philip Schroer, Alexandria, Va.

Five other veterans previously testified they had given Williams and his company similar deposits which, they said, were not returned and the promised houses never completed. The veterans said when they inquired about the houses, they received letters attributing th noncompletion to delays in getting materials.

The Veterans' Administration official, who told the court Williams had made no application for approval of the houses, was Morgan B. Callahan.

Anderson Clears Klein in Grain Trading List

The name of Dr. Ernest L. Klein of Chicago, a former member of the Reparations Commission headed by Edwin W. Pauley, should not have been included in a recent list of Government officials speculating in commodities, Agriculture Secretary Anderson said last night.

Anderson released a letter he had sent to Klein, in which he acknowledged that Klein's market operations took place long after his service with the Government had ended.

"Inasmuch as your service with the Government ended in July, 1946, and your transactions in commodity futures did not take place until March, 1947, it is obvious that your name should not have been reported to the department and included in the list of traders released January 27," Anderson wrote.

2. Whether British authorities would permit shipment of weapons into Palestine for use by militia.

The commission directed Dr. Eduardo Morgan, delegate from Panama, to begin negotiations with the British on the disposition of the 30,000 Jewish immigrants now being held in detention camps on Cyprus.

The commission also decided to begin work tomorrow on a special report to the Security Council on the general security problem in Palestine. This involves the question of whether an international military force will be needed in addition to the proposed militia.

2 British Constables Slain in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Gunmen believed members of the Jewish Stern Gang killed two British constables tonight in downtown Jerusalem.

The constables were walking along Ben Yehuda street when the gunmen opened fire. One was killed instantly. The other died a few hours later. They were the third and fourth Britons killed in Palestine within 48 hours. The other two, both soldiers, reportedly were slain by Arabs.

An explosion believed caused by a grenade injured five Jews tonight in Zion Square.

Judges Put in Six-Hour Day, On 43 Cases

The average judge in our Municipal Court works six hours and five minutes a day, 21 days a month, and knocks off at 12 minutes to 5 in the afternoon.

And he handles about 900 cases a month—about 43 a day.

This data comes from the judges' own time sheets for—even as you and I—they must account for their working hours.

If a judge's car won't start some chilly morning and makes him 10 minutes late, that goes on his time sheet. If he has to go to the dentist, that's on the sheet. And if a judge has to work some night, that's on the time sheet, too.

The time sheets filed by the ten judges for October, November and December — making 30 judge-months in all—give a good cross-section of the municipal court working schedule. The 3-month period is large enough to show—and does show—the effect on the court's total working time of vacations, holidays, Sundays, Saturday half-days, illness and death.

These factors are what brings the average month down to 21 days.

The time sheets do not show how much of a judge's time outside the courthouse is taken up with reading and thinking about his work. But they do tell a great deal about the working schedules of the judges.

It is plain, for instance, that the late Judge Nathan Margold's reputation for hard work was well earned. Although he was sick during the months before his death in mid-December, Judge Margold's average working day was the longest in the court.

And although Judge Aubrey B. Fennell is well known to have been carrying on despite ill health, his average work day is by no means the shortest, and is only 25 minutes below the court average.

Shortest workday was put in by Judge Ellen K. Raedy.

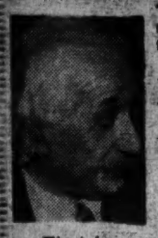
Dr. Einstein Calls Russia's Isolationism Trend Dangerous

Dr. Albert Einstein yesterday made public a letter to four Soviet scientists in which he told them that Russia was embarked on a "trend toward unlimited isolationism."



Einstein

He said it would be "disastrous" to Russia as well as all other nations.

The famed mathematician's comments were in an open letter, in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, replying to an attack made on him by the Soviet scientists last November.

Had Criticized Einstein

The four men, one of them the president of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, had written in the Moscow New Times that Einstein's support of a world government was "dangerous and harmful" to the cause of peace.

The burden of their long argument was that the idea of world government was only a cloak for "unlimited plans" of American imperialists. It contained a ringing defense of national sovereignty as a protection against "world domination of capitalistic monopolies."

Einstein's reply: Such arguments are "a kind of mythology."

It is "difficult for me to take the alleged exploitation of the world by the United States seriously," he wrote.

Cites Socialism Points

He expressed his belief that American capitalism or free enterprise could not prevent depressions and unemployment, and said socialism had advantages offsetting its drawbacks whenever its management lives up, "at least to some extent," to adequate standards.

But Einstein pointed out, he thought the danger of "degeneration into tyranny" was more acute in a nation where the government "has authority not only over the armed forces but also over all the channels of education and information as well as over the economic existence of every single citizen."

He said he was surprised to find that the Russians were such "passionate opponents of anarchy in the economic sphere, and yet equally passionate advocates of anarchy, e. g., unlimited sovereignty, in the sphere of international politics."

Red Front Donors' Tax Deductions Hit

Senator Ball Says Treasury Allows Cuts for Aid to Eight Listed Groups

By The Associated Press

Senator Ball (R., Minn.) said yesterday the Treasury is okaying income tax deductions for donations to eight groups labeled "subversive" by the Attorney General.

The Senator described all eight as "Communist fronts."

Ball said his office staff found the organizations among 81 listed by Attorney General Clark last November 23 as "subversive"—opposed to our kind of government.

They also appear, he told a reporter, on a Treasury list of "charitable, religious, scientific, literary or educational" organizations. This makes contributions to them tax-free.

A Treasury official said the Department has no power to separate "good" from "bad" organizations when making up its tax deductible list. It merely follows definitions in the law which Congress passed, he said.

But Ball said the Treasury is "very tough" about denying deductions for many other organizations "with only the slightest political tinge."

Ball identified the eight groups as: Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee; National Council of American-Soviet Friendship; Hollywood Writers' Mobilization; International Workers Order; Ohio School of Social Sciences, Cleveland, Ohio; Philadelphia School of Social Sciences; Samuel Adams School, Boston, Mass.; and School of Jewish Studies, New York City.

Meanwhile, Representative Latham (R., N. Y.) said in a House speech "the American people are entitled to a full explanation" of why President Truman named Philip C. Jessup United States representative in the Interim Committee of the United Nations' General Assembly.

Jessup Defers Comment

Latham said that Jessup, professor of international law at Columbia University, "appears as a member of the board of sponsors of the National Emergency Council for Democratic Rights, a Communist front organization cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee in its report 1311, dated March 29, 1944."

In New York, Jessup said he would not comment "until I have had a chance to see the Congressman's full statement."

He added that "my entire record is available to the Congressman or to anyone else interested in seeing it."

80,000 Aliens in U. S. Illegally, Says McDowell

By The Associated Press

Representative McDowell (R., Pa.) said today a Government official estimates that "80,000 and possibly more" foreigners in this country are here illegally; are "Communists, Fascists, criminals," or persons of bad morals.

The Pennsylvanian told reporters he is recommendnig that the House Un-American Activities Committee launch a full-scale investigation. He said he hopes that will lead to tighter laws and sending some of these people back to their own countries.

Weather Report Contradicts Witness Who Told of Driving Laughlin Because of 'Rain'

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A United States Weather Bureau report calculated to jolt Attorney James J. Laughlin's alibi defense in the Laughlin-Peckham abortion trial, was placed in evidence yesterday and will be read to the District Court jury considering the case.

The report, according to Prosecutor Arthur E. McLaughlin, shows that it did not rain in the District on March 20, 1947, a date on which some Government witnesses said Laughlin was with his erstwhile sweetheart, Mrs. Esther Pickard Hobbs, preparatory to an abortion.

Two daughters of Laughlin had testified that, to the contrary, on that date they had gone with their father to have his eye treated at the Episcopal Eye and Ear Hospital. They said they were driven from the hospital to a restaurant by Dr. James P. Lyons.

Dr. Lyons, a defense witness had told the court he drove the Laughlins because it was raining the night he met them at the hospital. He could not recall the date of the incident but according to the daughters' testimony it was last March 20.

Earlier, 26-year-old bespectacled William Gibbs Hobbs, who married Esther last May 2 in Silver Spring, Md., testified concerning a letter Mrs. Hobbs is alleged to have written Laughlin last May 16. The letter absolved the lawyer of complicity in her pregnancy and abortion.

Hobbs, injured in Army service, appeared fit at ease on the stand in contrast with the cool, half-smiling demeanor of his wife.

He said he and Mrs. Hobbs conferred with Laughlin in the latter's office from 11 p. m. May 15 to 5 a. m. May 16. He said she wrote no letters during that time. He said he was with her all the next day until 7 p. m. when she left him for "about half an hour."

Mrs. Hobbs admitted visiting the office of Laughlin during the half-hour period mentioned by her husband.

"I went there to get my suitcase," she replied to questioning by Prosecutor Charles B. Murray.

She said that the suitcase contained some gifts presented her by Laughlin in the past which she was returning.

"Why did you go to the office alone?" Murray asked.

"Because the night before, Mr. Laughlin and my husband had a few words and Mr. Laughlin hit my husband and knocked off his glasses . . ." Mrs. Hobbs explained.

She denied categorically that she wrote any letters in the office. She also denied assertions made by a former landlady that Mrs. Hobbs had told her the pregnancy was caused by "a man named George" and that the abortion was performed by a nurse in Maryland.

She declared that she, Hobbs, and a "Luke McKenzie," identified as a former business associate of Hobbs, originally visited Laughlin's office on May 15 to discuss a $250 suit filed against Hobbs by Laughlin for legal fees.

She said that while in the office she signed her name to several onionskin papers relating to the suit.

This was brought out by Murray who is seeking to cast doubt on the authenticity of the signature "Esther" on two letters to Laughlin, one of which said: "You are not responsible for me being pregnant . . . nor for the abortion."

Cross examined by Laughlin, Mrs. Hobbs denied that she had demanded money from the lawyer under threat of "getting you into trouble" by "blaming you for the abortion."

Earlier Detective Lieut. Edgar Scott of the Homicide Squad admitted he "made a mistake" when he asked Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., codefendant to give his name audibly so it could be heard by Mrs. Hobbs before she identified the doctor at a police lineup last September 9.

Comus Tenant Farmer Freed in Arson Case

A Comus, Md., tenant farmer was acquitted yesterday in Rockville Police Court of arson charges which, police said, grew out of a rent dispute. Paul Gregg, 43, was cleared of a charge he burned down a five-room frame house following a rent dispute between his father and brother. Judge Alger Y. Barbee ruled there was insufficient evidence that Gregg set fire to the home despite threats he had made to that effect.

Ball's Defeat Mapped By State Labor Group

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 29 (AP).—The Minnesota State Federation of Labor (AFL) today initiated a campaign to seek defeat at the polls next fall of Senator Ball (R., Minn.) and any other Minnesota members of Congress it may deem unfriendly to labor.

The federation created Minnesota labor's League for Political Action and named a 10-man executive committee to carry on the work.

Frederick Jury Panels May Be 45% Women

Frederick, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Twenty-one women residing in Frederick and in the county have been drawn for the grand and petit juries that will serve at the February term of circuit court opening here February 16.

If they serve, the women will comprise 45 per cent of the panels. It was the largest drawing of women jurors since they became eligible for service under a 1947 legislative act.

Farm Machinery Output Record in 1948 Predicted

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—George C. Delp, president of the New Holland Machine Co., today said 1948 would bring the biggest level of farm machinery production in history.

The industry is breaking production marks to give the American farmer the machinery he needs to meet a record demand for food, Delp told the Virginia Equipment Association.

"It will be several years yet," he said, "before you dealers can get every machine in the quantity you want, when you want it. But even today, on some things, we've already caught up with demand."

He stressed the need for mechanization on the farms of the South, declaring:

"Southern agriculture today is at the beginning of a mechanical revolution that will make the South one of the greatest agricultural producers in American history."

Okla. Students Demonstrate Against Negro Entrance Ban

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

BURN FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT—Protesting the exclusion of Negroes from the University of Oklahoma, students yesterday demonstrated by burning the Fourteenth Amendment in the box held by Coed Wanda Lou Howard. Speeches were made by Jack Bales (left) and Howard Friedman (right). The ashes of the civil rights amendment were mailed to President Truman. Seven Negroes are seeking admission to the university.

Norman, Okla., Jan. 29 (AP).—White students at the University of Oklahoma, some dressed as mourners, solemnly cremated a copy of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution today in protest against the State's ban on Negro students at the institution.

Then they mailed the ashes to President Truman.

After the demonstration the board of regents of the university was advised by the State attorney general to deny the enrollment applications of six Negroes which touched off the student action.

Mac Q. Williamson, State attorney general, declared the applications differed from issues involved in the application of Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23-year-old Negro who seeks to enter the university's law school.

Six More Applications

The United States Supreme Court on January 12 ordered Oklahoma to grant Mrs. Fisher equal and immediate educational facilities with white students. The State set up a separate law school for Negroes at the State capitol in Oklahoma City. Mrs. Fisher refused to attend the school and on Monday was denied admission to the university.

Six Negroes applied to the University of Oklahoma yesterday for graduate work in four departments.

Three students actually took part in the ceremonies but others assisted in preparing for the protest meeting.

An estimated 1000 students watched the demonstration in freezing weather. The university's enrollment is approximately 12,000 as the second semester opened today.

The Fourteenth Amendment provides in part: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States . . . nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Amendment Read

Howard Friedman, a senior government student from Oklahoma City, was the main speaker. He told the gathering "we protest any type of discrimination. Those who say we can have equality under separate schools are blind."

He pointed out Negroes were denied entrance on race alone. "The university is to develop minds, not preserve color lines," Friedman added.

Wanda Lou Howard, Marlow, Okla., opened the demonstration by reading the Fourteenth Amendment. Jack Bales, Dewey, Okla., also made a short speech.

Then the copy of the amendment was burned, placed in a box and tied with black ribbon. Many students followed the three to the postoffice for the mailing.

Dr. George L. Cross, president of the university, had no comment.

The six who applied for admission yesterday seek entrance to four graduate schools—business administraton, architectural engineering, school administration and zoology.

Langston University, the State's only college for Negroes, does not have a graduate school.

Negro Is Rejected By Mo. Baptist College

Liberty, Mo., Jan. 29 (AP).—William Jewell College today denied an application of a Negro Baptist pastor for admittance.

Dr. Walter Pope Binns, president of the college, a Baptist institution, said the application of the Rev. William L. Blake, 29-year-old pastor here, was turned down because of the school's policy on racial matters.

"The school always had a policy established and Negroes have never been admitted," Dr. Binns said. "The school sees no need for changing the practice."

50 Hurt as Students Battle Shanghai Police

Shanghai, Jan. 29 (U.P.) — Fifty persons were injured, some seriously, today when 5000 students fought armed police in downtown Shanghai and on the Tungchi University campus.

Mayor K. C. Wu was manhandled and his glasses were broken. He was not injured.

Undergraduates demonstrated against an order banning the "self-governing" student council and arrests after anti-British rioting January 17.

School Aid Proposed

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 29 (U.P.)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's administration today recommended a permanent 56-million-dollar increase in State aid for education but teacher groups immediately announced that they would fight for more.

Balkans 'One' Despite Soviet Blast at Union

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Expressions of Balkan solidarity came from two capitals of southeastern Europe today in the face of a Soviet frown on a federation of her satellites.

A diplomatic source in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, commented on the declaration by Pravda, Communist Party newspaper in Moscow, that federation and a customs union were "problematic and farfatched" schemes and unnecessary. The informant said "it is not necessary to go much further because, with the exception of an outright organizational setup creating a central executive body, federation virtually exists."

An informant in Belgrade said "we already have plans for a customs union with most of the countries involved and it will only be a matter of stabilizing economies and equalizing monies before we can realize this aim."

In Tirana, capital of Albania, Premier Enver Hoxha told parliament Albania was united with Yugoslavia and Bulgaria "until death." He emphasized the closest ties with his neighbor, Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, but said nothing about federation.

Pravda yesterday repudiated a January 17 statement by Communist Premier Georgi Dimitrov of Bulgaria who declared it was only a matter of time until Poland, Czechoslovakia and even Greece federate with the five Balkan countries. Marshal Tito also had spoken favorably of federation.

More State Funds Sought for Education in Va.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—A strong plea for more State aid for education—particularly in teachers' salaries—was made today by a spokesman for the Virginia Education Association who appeared at a joint Senate-House committee hearing on Governor Tuck's budget proposals for the next biennium.

Members of the Senate finance committee and House appropriations committee listened attentively while Robert F. Williams, executive secretary of the Virginia Education Association, spoke to them of some of the major problems the VEA says is facing education in Virginia.

The VEA, Williams declared, is disturbed about the situation in the State which he described as "a crisis in education." He expressed appreciation for what members of the Legislature and Governor Tuck have done to relieve the situation. This year, Williams declared, 65 million dollars in State and local funds are being spent to educate Virginia children.

Pays Tribute to Transport

Williams said "we are proud of the fact that Virginia is twelfth in the number of children in all States between the ages of 5 and 17 enrolled in schools" and he described this as "a tribute to the excellent transportation system provided."

"Unfortunately, education has become an expanding business in an inflated era," he added and then explained there were many emergency teachers in Virginia schools who have had no college training at all. There is great need for both trained teacher and adequate school buildings, he added.

At present-day costs, Williams estimated at least 257 million dollars worth of school construction and repairs are needed.

The VEA spokesman said what gains had been made in aiding teachers' salaries had been more than offset by rapid increases in the cost of living and pointed to wide variations in pay in some of the localities in Virginia.

Teacher Benefits Cited

He recalled the VEA legislative program which calls for a State-wide minimum salary schedule, improvements in the retirement plan and a State-wide sick leave program.

Meanwhile the General Assembly received the Moses bill providing for State operation of school buses and received promise of another bill certain to provoke some heavy specialized opposition.

Delegate J. Bradie Allman of Rocky Mount said he would put in tomorrow a bill amending the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act to exclude dry counties, cities and towns from sharing in ABC profits.

The Allman proposal, sure to bestir the most vigorous opposition, would permit dry counties to participate fully in ABC profit sharing until six months after the enactment of the law and would then require a wet vote in a referendum for full continuance.

The school bus bill, whose principal patron, Senator Charles T. Moses of Appomattax, headed a special study commission that reported on this and other school matters, would make participation optional with the counties and would give the State Board of Education authority to obtain through purchase or lease the needed land, garages and other facilities.

During the day the General Assembly saw also:

1. A request from the State Chamber of Commerce that the House and Senate use its influence on the Congress toward a 10-billion-dollar reduction in Federal expenditures as a means of stabilizing the economy.

2. Introduction in the House of Delegates of a resolution of Delegate Edward T. Haynes of Richmond to amend the State constitution so that State senators would be elected for six-year terms and delegates for four-year terms beginning with the November elections in 1951.

3. Passage in the House of a joint resolution against the diversion of highway funds.

Banker's Wife Fatally Burned

MRS. JOHN MOORHEAD, 25, estranged wife of Thomas C. Moorhead, Washington investment banker, was fatally burned Wednesday evening in her parents home, Sewickley Heights, Pa., when her clothing was ignited, apparently by a cigarette. Miscount Seen In Va. Bank Fraud Case

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—A million-dollar miscalculation on the part of the Government may have broken the back of Hugh Namon Rakes' dairy farm empire and led to his arrest and conviction in the Fredericksburg bank case, Judge Johnson J. Hayes observed during the Federal District Court case here today.

The judge's remarks came on the eve of the date set for his passing sentence on Rakes and William Reeves Gardner, the banker whom Rakes allegedly aided in misapplication of funds of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg.

Judge Hayes noted during the trial of a related case involving Clarence L. Robey, president of the Purcellville National Bank, that the Department of Internal Revenue had settled for a $1400 payment after asking "far more than one million dollars" for income tax adjustments from the Rakes' estates.

The tax claim came at a time, the judge said, when Rakes was negotiating with the Jefferson Standard Line Insurance Co. for a second one-million-dollar loan. That apparently stopped the transactions, he added, and made it impossible for Rakes to meet his obligations.

Rakes has been convicted of aiding in the misapplication of Fredericksburg bank funds through resort to a check-kiting scheme which financed his dairy enterprises, but ultimately led to the collapse of the Fredericksburg bank.

The court also concerned itself today with the hearing of further evidence against Robey and a brief hearing of the nolo contendere case of Harry Lamson, Washington real estate broker and also charged with aiding Gardner.

Va. Assembly Gets Plan for Jefferson Road

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—The Virginia State Highway Department today presented to the General Assembly its recommendations for the proposed Monticello highway.

The report on the highway, which would connect the Jefferson Memorial in Washington with Jefferson's home near Charlottesville, was prepared as a result of a unanimous resolution introduced by State Senator John B. Battle at the last session of the Legislature.

The highway department, according to Gen. James A. Anderson, chairman, has recommended that the highway be constructed in stages, using existing roadways wherever possible. Under the plan submitted, about 25 additional miles of highway would be required.

Follows Shirley Route

The proposed highway would begin at the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, run over the Shirley Memorial Highway to a point north of Springfield in Fairfax County.

About 19 miles of new construction would extend the road from Shirley Highway, running north of Burke-Fairfax Station and Clifton to connect with Route 28 north of Manassas.

Continuing southwest, and missing the business section of Manassas, the road would connect with Route 29 and continue through Culpeper, Madison and Ruckersville to Charlottesville. Another 6 miles of new highway would be required to by-pass the business section of Charlottesville and lead directly to Monticello.

An alternate plan, the same as far as Culpeper, would follow Route 15 to a by-pass at Orange and Route 231 through Gordonsville and directly to Jefferson's home. This plan, though 6 miles shorter than the first, was not recommended by the highway department.

In urging the first plan, General Anderson said that Route 29 is scheduled for ultimate development as a four-lane highway and would be widened whether or not the Monticello highway follows the route.

He explained that existing plans in the State's 20-year highway program call for expenditure of $11,156,940 and that the additional expenditures for the Monticello highway would bring the total to $15,346,380.

Four Lanes for 61 Miles

Anderson's report stated that 61 miles of the highway north of Charlottesville would be heavy-duty four-lane road, 23 miles from Remington to Manassas would be dual-lane heavy duty, and the 10 miles from Manassas to Springfield would be both two and four-lane heavy duty.

At a hearing before the House committee on roads, General Anderson opposed a bill to increase the cities' allotment for highways from $4000 to $10,000 a mile.

A bill to boost the allotment for streets used as a part of the highway system has been introduced by Senators Robert F. Baldwin, jr., Norfolk City, and Earl A. Fitzpatrick of Roanoke City.

Anderson said that the cities, through city fees, State and Federal aid, were getting more than the State for maintenance of roads.

Child's Story Links Parent To Arson

Ferndale, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—A blue-eyed girl of 10 testified today that she set fire to a neighbor's home three times "to please my mother."

Flaxen-haired Louise Morrison said that after the house burned to the ground last June and was rebuilt, she set fire to the back porch in October, then to the front porch in November.

"Mother asked me if I could do it," Louise said in Police Court. Her foster mother, Mrs. Helen Josephine Lock, 42, was ordered held in $15,000 bail on three charges of arson.

The girl said her mother asked her to burn a seven-room bungalow owned by Mrs. Rose Sellner of Jessups, Md.

When Magistrate David B. Dunker asked why, Mrs. Sellner said she and the Locks had argued over a garage Mrs. Lock's husband wanted to build across the street from the Sellner bungalow.

Louise said she was asked to burn the house last June 5 and "I said I guessed I could and I got matches and coal oil from drums in back of the garage.

"Sister watched the dogs so they wouldn't bark and I set fire to the house and it burned up."

The house was two thirds rebuilt October 11, when, said Louise, "My mother said that she would like to see it burn down again." The blaze was confined to the back porch.

Again on November 16, Louise said, she asked her foster mother if she wouldn't like to have the house burn down again.

"'No, they'll get suspicious,'" Louise said her mother replied, but Louise decided to go ahead and set fire to the front porch anyway "to please mother."

Mrs. Lock, who refused to testify, pleaded innocent.

Arnold Fine White Bread goes further because of more food value in firmer, thinner slices. Serve it—and waste less.

The Bread that "Couldn't be Beat" has been made even Better!

We of the Arnold Bakers family don't usually indulge in wild statements. So, before we say anything that sounds the least bit boastful, let's review the facts.

In an independent survey, made just a few months ago in the largest city in the country, Arnold Fine White Bread received more votes of preference than any other bread.

You'd think a baker who got such a vote of confidence would sit back and just feel satisfied with himself. But not us. We got mad because the survey gave Arnold Bread only a 31.7 per cent preference over the next highest brand. That might please almost anybody—but not us.

We went to our test kitchen and we added more honey—which keeps Arnold Bread softer and fresher longer. We added more butter (25% more 93 score butter)—which gives Arnold Bread its extra richness and flavor. We added 33⅓% extra milk—which makes Arnold Bread more nutritious.

We hope you like the new and even better Arnold Bread as much as we do. It's at your grocer's now. Don't forget to ask for a loaf. And don't forget the name—Arnold.

Gas Company's Net Rises 19% In 12 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported consolidated net income of $1,244,789 for 1947, an increase of $204,648 or 19 per cent over the previous year.

After provision for preferred stock dividends, net income was equivalent to $1.88 a share on 427,897 shares of stock outstanding at the end of 1947. This compared with $1.41 a share on 425,000 shares outstanding at the end of 1946.

The gas company was the only one of the utilities in Washington which managed to show an increase in net for the year. Marked improvement was attributed to company's foresight in converting to natural gas during 1947, resulting economies and to colder weather.

Gross operating revenues for the system, which includes subsidiaries in Maryland and Virginia, were $16,335,733 last year compared with $14,598,703 in 1946.

Excluding the subsidiaries, Washington gas showed net income of $1,179,252 in 1947, a gain of $120,156 over 1946. December net was $473,454, an upsurge of $211,876 over the same 1946 month.

System gas sales were 132,465,139 therms for the year and 16,682,539 for December, increases of 13.9 and 34.5 per cent respectively over 1946.

RECORD SALES: As expected, Washington department store sales in 1947 set a new all-time high in dollar volume. Official figures released last night by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond showed local volume last year was 4 per cent higher than in 1946, the previous record. December sales here spurted 14 per cent ahead of the same 1946 month. Regionally, store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District scored a 5 per cent increase for the year, while December was 14 per cent ahead.

NASD LEADERS: Richard F. Dunn of the Washington firm of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath has been elected to a three-year term on the National Association of Securities Dealers' District 11 committee. He succeeds James H. Lemon of Johnston, Lemon & Co., whose term expired. Also elected to the district committee was C. T. Williams of Baltimore. New officers of the NASD for the District of Columbia and four nearby States are W. Carroll Mead, Baltimore, chairman; J. Murray Atkins, Charlotte, N. C., vice chairman, and Martin J. Bayly, Philadelphia, secretary.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP)—Trading in grains on the Board of Trade about broke even today. Wheat was up as much as 2 cents a bushel. Corn dropped as much as 1¾ cents. Oats split between ⅝ higher and ⅛ lower.

Wheat took its strength, amounting to 3 cents at one time, from a mention in President Truman's special message to Congress that wheat exports should reach 500 million bushels from the 1947 crop if possible. The accepted figure previously in the trade had been 450 million bushels mostly recently.

Wheat closed ½ to 2 cents a bushel higher, May, 2.91¾@2.92¼; corn was ⅛ to 1⅛ lower, May, 2.58 and oats were ⅝ higher to ½ lower, May, 1.23¼. Soybeans were unchanged to 6 cents lower, March, 4.08. Range follows:

Shabby Performance

The Committee of 100 on the Federal City has cast its opposition to the Auchincloss bill upon the waters of public opinion with a total of 13 affirmative votes. That in itself reduces this attack upon the idea of home rule for the District to farcical proportions. A subcommittee of which Col. A. B. Barber was chairman brought in a detailed report. It was subjected to severe criticism by several members, including Dr. L. F. Schmeckebier, an expert on the subject. After a patently inadequate discussion the Committee of 100 allowed itself to be committed to an inept substitute for the Auchincloss Plan by an insignificant minority of its membership. It was indeed a shabby performance.

The substance of the report adopted is equally discreditable, in our opinion, to a group which claims to serve the best interests of Washington. It speaks of the Auchincloss bill as an attempt "to fit the straight jacket of home rule on the Federal City." Presumably the authors of the report were alluding to a "strait jacket," which Webster defines as "a coat of strong material, binding the body closely, for restraining the violently insane . . ." District citizens have long complained that, by depriving them of suffrage, Congress has classified them with criminals and the insane. They must be more than a little confused now that an enlightened plan to restore local suffrage is denounced by a group of local planners as a device for fastening on the District a jacket for restraint of the insane.

No doubt some constructive criticism of the Auchincloss plan is imbedded in the report which the committee accepted. But, if so, it will be submerged beneath guffaws over the principal scheme which the committee itself has concocted. It asks for a city council to be appointed by the President. "If local participation in making of policies for the District is desired," the report says, the council could be enlarged to include some elected members. But in any event, the committee urges, the city manager, who would be responsible to the local council under the Auchincloss bill, should be replaced by a single administrator to be appointed by the President. Instead of being responsible to the council, the administrator would have the veto power over its policy-making decisions. In short, the committee proposes a little dictatorship for the Capital of the world's greatest democracy.

This sort of response to a conscientious effort in Congress to restore to Washington the only measure of self-government that can be achieved by simple statute suggests a pathetic bankruptcy of local statesmanship. The "Committee of 13" wants to return to the discredited regime of Governor Shepherd which led Congress to sweep away suffrage rights here more than 70 years ago. If this reactionary throwback to a bankrupt idea is not promptly repudiated by the real Committee of 100 or other civic groups, the hope for achievement of home rule will be very slender indeed.

Russian Ban

Through Pravda Moscow has just put its foot down on a suggestion by Premier Georgi Dimitrov of Bulgaria that the Balkans together with Czechoslovakia and Poland should be joined in a confederation based on a customs union. The action is stunning both as a rebuke and as a seeming reversal of policy. To many people Comrade Dimitrov, who used to be secretary general of the Comintern till its dissolution in 1943, is the most important Communist leader outside of the Soviet Union. He is outstanding enough to be called the "Elder Statesman" of communism—seemingly so secure in his proximity to the Muscovite elite that one would have imagined him an exponent of policy rather than a victim of a busted trial balloon. The layman will conclude that the Bulgarian comrade has been relegated to a back seat in favor of Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

Still inexplicit is the answer to the question as to whether the ban on an eastern union includes one on the more restricted Balkan federation. Till yesterday this appeared to be inevitable. For it was generally held to be Soviet policy. All the comings and goings of Balkan potentates in recent months were said to have that end in view. The larger confederation came into discussion only after Molotov had decided to have nothing to do with the Marshall Plan. It never seemed likely, despite the waving of the flag of Pan Slavism by the Muscovites. The peoples in the eight eastern countries total about 100 million, and, as time went on, such a consolidation might not have proved amenable to Moscow. The lesser compact, while not explicitly touched upon in the rebuke administered to Dimitrov, appears also to have gone glimmering, and for the same reason, in the light of the Pravda statement—except, perhaps, a purely Balkan bloc for purposes limited to the reduction of Greece and the division of the Macedonian part of Greece.

To keep divided is to keep conquered. It would seem reasonable to suppose that the Soviet Union wants neither to absorb the adjacent territories nor to let them unite and so acquire strength. That its object is to make them feeders of their own military state is a view that will be fortified by the Pravda statement. The virtue of the American position in favor of the union of the west, on the contrary, is that the United States, far from being afraid of a third force, is anxious to see and assist the Western nations acquire the feeling of independence which would come from a western compact.

Military Mind

In several quarters, attention is again being drawn to the pervasiveness of the military influence in our Government. The problem of insuring the subordination of military to civil power is one about which the citizenry must always be concerned, in and out of season, since civil control is a cornerstone of our institutions. It arises with particular application after a war—as much from the Government's initiative in making use in peace of the quality and leadership personified in war as from the infiltration of the military themselves. Wars, obviously, bring generals to the fore, and policy-makers turn naturally to men who have acquitted themselves well. After the late war the problem has been complicated by the fact that many generals are not professional. The military service gave civilians an opportunity to shine, and since they shone in uniform the tendency is to tag them as military. This applies to such men in the State Department as Gen. Charles E. Saltzman, Assistant Secretary of State for Occupied Areas, who is a stock broker by profession. Another factor in the present-day problem is that the last war left the country in a zone of war which was bound to give military counsel more than normal weight.

The true point of departure in the discussion is a definition of terms. It is not the military man per se of whom the citizen should beware when he sees him in high civilian councils. It is the military mind, and the military mind is not necessarily connected with a uniform; it is not unusual, for instance, for civilians in charge of service departments to grow more military than the military. What is the military mind? Certainly not a mind that wants war, for the military is habitually anxious to postpone armed conflict until it is ready to the last button, as was illustrated when the military kept asking Secretary Hull to protract his futile discussions with Japan. A military mind is totalitarian. It sees the answer to external problems only in terms of military preparedness. "Leave policy to the military," said Lord Salisbury, one of Britain's great Foreign Ministers, "and they would fortify the moon." It is a narrow mind, and it has no concept of other than military considerations. Examples are the schemes for arming both the Latin nations and the Chinese government as the best defense against international communism.

Though both Secretary Marshall and General Eisenhower are in favor of Latin rearmament, neither has what we would call a military mind. The sensitive appreciation of the different role of the military and the civilian that General Eisenhower revealed in his withdrawal from the presidential race showed that. On the contrary, General MacArthur has a military mind, and his job in Japan, unlike General Clay's in Germany, is modeled on military organization. That is one reason that he is unable to attract first-class civilians in his government; the civilian workers are under military officers. By the same token, General Clay has a civilian bent of mind, having enlisted as heads of departments distinguished civilians who also serve as his cabinet. An example of a military mind in a key civilian position is Admiral Leahy. Admiral Leahy is the President's Chief of Staff, a wartime innovation, but he is at the President's elbow in all manner of decisions, domestic and foreign. It is time in this respect to liquidate the office.

Thus the problem is more than a surface phenomenon, and the best way to solve it, it seems to us, is to raise pay standards and the prestige of the middle operating jobs in Government. It is Mr. Truman's headache that he cannot cajole good men out of civilian life. The reason lies both in inadequate pay and in the congressional badgering and executive ingratitude they court. Perhaps, as an interim measure, the President might try the method, which we have already suggested, of naming his man, trusting in the pressure of a presidential announcement to gain acceptance by the appointee and acquiescence by the appointee's employers.

German Conditions

The strikes in western Germany have spurred action which for the time being may allay the discontent. Fresh supplies have been made available from surplus American stores. For a quarter of a million dollars, to be paid out of the proceeds of German exports, clothes, hardware, tents, machinery and other useful equipment have been handed over. Why this was not done before seems inexplicable. Hunger is not the only cause of the low productivity of German labor in the occupied areas. When there is little or nothing to buy with earned money, incentive is lacking. As to food, the Bizonal Council is taking steps to stop hoarding and speed up collections. However, the real solution awaits the extension of economic authority to the new Bizonal Council—a condition not only of internal improvement but also of integration into Marshall Europe.

It is a dodging of the issue in Germany to put down the trouble to Communist inspiration. This is not confirmed by the reporters who hurried to the Ruhr when the demonstrations occurred. The conclusion of the London Times' correspondent at Essen is general. Scoffing at allegations of Communist plots, he says

> The want and the distress are beyond argument. For weeks, and in some cases for months, housewives, the old people, employes, and the light workers have received on their rations only bread and cereals. For them there has been, and there is today, no butter or margarine or lard, meat or fish. It is symptomatic of the human need that if you offer a public official—not of the lowest rank—a buttered slice of bread he does not feel humiliated nor does he betray embarrassment when he eats it at once in your presence.

Yet all that Representative Taber got from his visit to Germany was that the people seemed fat. He is said to have observed that since the women seem to be as much as 170 pounds, they were nutritionally taken care of. People full of starch and nothing but starch are apt to swell, but their bloated bellies are no indication of well-being. On the contrary, as any picture of starving people would show the Congressman, they are lacking in energy. If we continue to let these peoples go undernourished, either for want of food or for want of a proper distribution system, we shall have nobody with whom to work for the revival of western Europe.

Phony Economy

Senator Bridges' charge that the President had sent a phony budget on the European Recovery Program to Congress is utterly unfounded. It may indicate nothing worse than that the Senator had failed to read the President's explanation of the discrepancy between the 6.8-billion-dollar appropriation requested for the first 15 months of ERP and the 4.5-billion-dollar budget cost of the program for the same period. The explanation is simple: the gap between requested appropriations and estimated expenditures would permit the recovery administration to ship and to place an additional 2.3 billion dollars of orders during the fiscal year 1948-49 for which payment would not be made until the following fiscal year. That would enable officials in charge of the program to arrange, as the President explains, for more economical and systematic placement of orders.

The actual cost of the ERP would not be affected in any way by cutting down the amount of the initial appropriation, unless one assumes that the larger appropriation would be an encouragement to wasteful commitments. As a matter of fact, the danger that Marshall Plan funds might be wasted would be decidedly increased if the ERP were hampered in carrying out its program by congressional restrictions on spending. Such a policy would impair the chances of success of the Marshall Plan and be phony economy.

Nevertheless, it might be shrewd politics to reduce the size of the initial 6.8-billion-dollar appropriation (provided, of course, the sum voted was adequate to cover actual outlays during the 15-month period) as a concession to congressional reluctance to vote at this time for the spending of so large a sum. But the ERP not only has to have sufficient funds to pay its bills when they fall due, it must also be in a position to make deliveries of goods for which payment will not be required during the 15-month period. Most of the 2.3-billion-dollar difference between estimated actual outlays and the 6.8 billion dollars requested by the President will, in fact, be needed to meet payments on goods shipped during the 15-month period, but not paid for until the following fiscal year. Consequently, although it is not necessary for Congress to appropriate immediately the full sum requested for ERP, it is necessary for Congress to authorize the spending of most, if not all, the additional 2.3 billion dollars requested. Otherwise the ERP would be severely hampered in carrying out its program because of inability to enter into contracts calling for future payment.

Under the circumstances the 6.8-billion-dollar figure that Secretary Marshall regards as an irreducible minimum with which to start the program cannot be substantially reduced without jeopardy to the entire program. The most that can be done is to cut the initial appropriation to the amount required to cover actual outlays for the first 15 months. That would leave it up to Congress to review the program later on and vote the additional appropriations required to cover authorized obligations incurred in excess of the initial appropriation, as well as funds for the continuance of the program.

TIME IS THE STAR

Time is the single and perfect ice-clear star
That burns in the lime-green winter evening sky,
Long, long before the powdery later stars appear;
Solitary and silent, the single golden glittering eye.

Or time is the last and rustling crimson ailanthus leaf
That whispers dryly on the bough in evening wind,
Long after the other leaves have blown west in the dark,
Long, long after the winter branches have thinned.

Time is the moment here in the frost-sharp evening dusk
Before warm golden lights in the windows of houses appear,
The moment transfixed and unreturning, now all but lost,
Star, leaf and hour, but never so burningly clear.

VA Medical Probe

"Veteran" in his letter of January 22 indignantly protested the action of the new medical director of Veterans' Administration, Dr. Paul Magnuson, in sending a list of chiseling doctors to the American Medical Association for disciplinary action in cases involving out-patient veterans. Dishonestly padded bills rather than inferior medical service is the justifiable indictment. Because the AMA is not a Federal agency, "Veteran" prefers prosecution by the Department of Justice upon evidence provided by Veterans' Administrator Gray.

The ugly truth is both the AMA and our Department of Justice are without jurisdiction or remedy. The AMA can only wield moral suasion. The Department of Justice will find itself equally impotent. It will be most difficult legally to prove violations of Federal statutes. Investigation will even disclose that VA itself is responsible for the unholy mess it now self-righteously protests.

This scandal began when Congress by-passed our Civil Service and encouraged a spoils system for veterans not having service-connected or service-aggravated disabilities. Upon demand, Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley was given plenary means to revitalize the then senile and futile veterans' medical program. He did get things done. Among them he negotiated fee schedules with 21 State-wide medical groups for out-patient care of eligible veterans. The indefensible discriminations of those fee schedules now militate against effective prosecution by the Department of Justice.

The fee schedule compensating surgeons for an appendectomy provides proof that General Hawley largely is responsible for this political high-jacking of the public treasury. Appendicitis obviously is not service-connected. The veterans needing appendectomy must certify to VA that they are unable to pay for private care. Seventy per cent of VA admissions in 1947 were for such nonservice disabilities.

General Hawley contracted to pay surgeons in North Carolina $75 for an appendectomy. Those in New Jersey and Kansas were to receive $100 for the same service. But the surgeon in California was to receive $125 from the public treasury.

Congress should clear the way to assemble and coordinate all health functions and programs of our national Government under a single administrative agency. Only when this is done will the taxpayers' money be spent with justice, economy and satisfying efficiency.

AWVS Food Parcels

Last September you were so courteous as to print my letter regarding the overseas food parcel service which the American Women's Voluntary Service is providing at 1800 Connecticut ave. Through that letter came quantities of orders.

Your readers may now be interested in a letter (one of hundreds) recently received, acknowledging arrival of a parcel:

"I do so want to say thank you, thank you from the bottom of my heart, for your lovely gift food parcel which I received just before Christmas.

"During the war years I lived just outside of London, with my then four children . . . Several times I made long journeys across England to escape the German bombings, and I do so remember during one of these journeys, with a terrific air bombardment on, that I first came in contact with a crowd of American soldiers.

"Those dear fellows took my children, comforted them, gave them sweets and food from their lunch boxes, and did everything possible for me to help me get away.

"Later it was other Americans who dug out my parents and their neighbors from the rubble of a raid and saved them, though injured.

"So you see, I and my family hold all Americans in high esteem."

If any of your readers would like to send an Easter package, for $3.50 the AWVS will pack and send 7 pounds of food to any person in the war-torn countries. The sender's name is enclosed, and without doubt he will receive a heart-warming letter of appreciation. Further information may be obtained at the AWVS office, 1800 Connecticut ave. (Dupont 1481), between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. Mondays through Fridays.

RUTH S. DELANO,
Secretary, Washington Unit, AWVS.

"Documentary War"

Didn't you miss an important point in your January 28 editorial, "Documentary War?"

The British government of today contains not a single member of the government of 1938, which ordered the midnight visit to President Benes in Prague.

The French government of today is utterly different, in policy and membership, from the government of 1938 which yielded to Hitler over Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet government of today is headed by the same man, and has the same Foreign Minister, who negotiated the infamous deal with Hitler in 1939 and went on bargaining with him more than a year later. VERITAS.

Washington.

"Unity: Looking Ahead"

The free men of the whole world are inspired by a newspaper like The Washington Post. Your suggestion of January 24 that Canada and the United States keep the eye on the ball, and if it should ever be necessary, carry it over the line, has aroused nothing but hope and confidence in this King's loyal dominion.

As a Canadian who loves both the Union Jack and the Old Glory to the last full measure, may I say that many millions think you know the score. M. L. DAVIS.

Trading In Futures

May I attempt to dispel some misconceptions and try to give a specific answer to each of the 10 "facts" which Mr. MacDougall, in his letter of January 15, stated that I "would be unable to deny."

His point that "the only place where actual grain is bought and sold is the cash grain market" is as redundant as if he applied it to any other commodity. Both the cash grain and the futures grain markets gravitate to public marketing locations, and the more facilities such locations have, the better they are. The cash markets of Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis have the on-the-spot advantages of the insurance function of their future markets, just as the Chicago livestock market has the advantage of packer processing facilities.

"The grain futures market handles only futures contracts." Certainly, why not? " . . . Not contracts in any legal sense of the term . . ." definitely wrong. Fulfillment of these real and legal contracts is compelled by the rules and regulations of the markets in which they are created. They are recognized as legal by the Commodity Exchange Act, a Federal law under which futures exchanges operate.

"Futures markets lack consideration . . . there is no purchase money . . . " All provisions of the contract are fixed by the exchange with the exception of price. Price is determined between buyer and seller openly and competitively in a public market place, thus completing all considerations of the contract. A clearing member of the exchange, under its rules, takes responsibility for seeing that the contract terms are carried out. Such member requires the customer to deposit a margin to guarantee the contract's fulfillment. The difference between the value of the contract and the required margin is a form of credit essential to the transaction, and it produces the same required effect as an insurance premium.

"The wheat futures contract contains no description of the kind or grade . . . just wheat or corn or other generic sort of grain" is a palpably false statement. The exchange rules stipulate the grade and variety of wheat, e.g. No. 1 and No. 2 hard winter, etc.—all recognized milling and commercial qualities.

"When delivery results from trading in futures, delivery is made in the cash wheat market, not in the futures market." Does he expect carloads to be unloaded in the grain pit? Delivery is effected through the mechanics prescribed in the futures contract.

"It is the seller's option to determine what kind and grade to deliver, the so-called buyer has nothing to say." The kind and grade is clearly specified, and both buyer and seller know what to expect.

"The futures broker's buying customer does not deal with any particular seller, but only with his own broker . . . there are no legal parties." The broker is merely an agent, who goes into the open market on behalf of his principal.

"The so-called seller does not sell anything . . . he buys a chance on price changes." The seller, through his broker as agent, enters into an agreement to deliver to the buyer a specific quantity of prescribed grain under stipulated rules and regulations. This commitment is as completely binding on seller as on buyer.

"Both buyer and seller deposit the same amount of commission money . . . (this) would not be the case if the seller were actually selling anything." Commissions are fixed, open and known in advance to buyer and seller, as they should be. It is margins which are deposited. Whether he is acting for buyer or seller, it is only reasonable and good business that the clearing broker, who is responsible for the fulfillment of the contract, should require margin to be deposited by the customer as guarantee. Why should the guarantee from either party differ in amount?

" . . . There is no difference between what the 'speculator' does and what the 'hedger' does . . . they both g a m b l e on price changes." Nothing is further from the truth. The speculator assumes the risk of ownership and price changes; the hedger avoids them. The gambling would be done if the 'hedger' did not hedge, and as the chairman of the board of General Mills recently pointed out, the price of bread (and of other consumer commodities) would be higher.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Act Of Greatness

THE REASONS behind Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's decision to remove himself once and for all from consideration as a presidential candidate are many and varied, as must always be true in a situation so highly complex. But the reasons as they relate to the American political scene today should cause some serious self-searching on the part of everyone who pretends to any political responsibility.

The popular demand for Eisenhower for President grew in part at least out of a feeling that the time calls for something more than the self-seeking politician. It was the need for a strong man, a leader, a hero.

Eisenhower was keenly aware of how this entered into his popularity. He understood that many people were turning to him with the wistful belief that he could produce some sort of magic which would resolve the problems pressing so hard. A keen student of democracy, Eisenhower understood, too, that this was not a sign of political health. It disturbed him deeply that powers should be attributed to him which he did not possess.

A military man would be handicapped as President, a fact which General Eisenhower recognized. No matter how careful he was nor how far he bent over backward to avoid the appearance of favoring the armed forces, he would be accused of doing just that. Motives would be constantly sought in his military conditioning and background.

WHAT TROUBLED the General most about the whole experience was that even his friends would not take seriously his repeated protests that he did not want the Presidency or any high political office. They would smile skeptically when he would say with all possible earnestness that he meant what he said. And the skepticism was not allayed when he said with equal earnestness that a military man should not shut the door to a draft for the Presidency in the event of some unforeseeable circumstance.

That, said cynical Washington, is the loophole which makes it possible to organize a draft. It was in part genuine modesty that held him back from issuing a statement. The very fact of saying no was a kind of boast that popular demand could be resisted in no other way. Or so the harassed general reasoned.

Once the decision was taken to say an unmistakeable no, Eisenhower immediately felt more at peace with himself and the world than he had since the boom had begun. It remained to make his language clear beyond the possibility of misinterpretation.

Thus he debated whether to say he "could not accept the nomination" or he would not accept it. He decided finally on "could" instead of "would" as being the stronger word.

THERE WERE many who sought to dissuade him from the final step. Half an hour before the statement was to be made public a politician friend got the general on the telephone and tried for 10 minutes to talk him out of his intention.

Eisenhower was never under any illusion about the attitude of the professional politicians toward him. He knew that the Republican managers and bosses would take him only if they were forced to. That is why he persisted in believing that the nomination was a remote contingency and this helps to explain his reluctance to announce that he was putting the crown aside.

The tempest in a teapot over remarks he was supposed to have made at a Washington dinner party amused him enormously. This effort—there are those who believe it was deliberately framed—to make it seem that he held radical views on taxing business caused him not a moment's worry. When a loyal friend who had been present on the occasion offered to make an affidavit saying that Eisenhower had expressed no such views, the general thanked him warmly and declined the offer.

On the whole the response to his statement has gratified him. It has been hinted that he wanted to sideswipe General MacArthur, which is unfair. He felt compelled to state his reasons for withdrawing. But in doing so he was careful to say, "At least this is true in my case."

Some of his most persistent admirers began to talk almost at once about 1952. Eisenhower's answer to this is that he will then be 62-years-old. There has been no suggestion of any other political office, such as a Cabinet post, and he has no intention of accepting any such post if it were offered.

General Eisenhower has performed an act of greatness. He has performed it with the humility and the dignity that characterized a great man.

Beecham's Criticism

In re your front page story January 25 about the young musician, Ferruccio Burco, and Sir Thomas Beecham, conductor of the London Philharmonic Orchestra, I have yet to hear Mr. Beecham say a nice thing about a fellow musician or any music except that which he conducts. A few years back he made some deprecating remarks about jazz music which to me sounded extremely narrow-minded.

I, myself, am not a jazz fiend, nor do I know a thing about Ferruccio Burco, but I do feel that Sir Thomas Beecham has not reached the epitome of perfection, which entitles him to talk down everything contemporary or everything which is not tried and proven.

Oil From Coal

By Frank A. Howard

New Industry Aborning

Editor's Note: Mr. Howard is the former president of the Standard Oil Development Co., and is a member of the board of trustees of the George Washington University.

THERE ARE three important types of industrial fuel—coal, oil and natural gas, but it has been apparent to all engineers that coal is the base of the industrial pyramid. The coal industry, though relatively small in itself, supports a vast superstructure of basic industries, including the steel industry, the railroads, and above these the many diversified uses of other strata of industrial society.

A succession of scientific discoveries and technical developments clearly mark a trend toward the ultimate conversion of much of the coal reserves of the civilized world, and especially of the United States, into liquid fuel and gas. Our coal reserves may prove as much as 100 times as great as our reserves of oil and natural gas. Whereas our national resources in gas and oil must be measured in generations, coal reserves can certainly be measured in multiples of a thousand years.

THE TECHNICAL developments of the past generation, which forecast the trend of the coal industry, can be said to have started with the Bergius Process which was first demonstrated in Germany just about the time of the First World War. By this process hydrogen gas was made to combine with powdered coal to produce liquid fuel.

Between 1926 and 1929 American interests negotiated with the Germans and took over a new development based on the Bergius Process which the German chemical industry had fathered. This new development, applicable both to oil refining and coal liquefaction, was called the I. G. hydrogenation process. It was the first industrially feasible process by which coal could be converted into oil. The investment required was still very high and costs were about 25 cents a gallon, which was hign but within reason for a nation such as Germany which had no important oil or natural gas of its own.

In the meantime, the industrial conversion of coal in Germany started along another line which had been fathered by the coal interests at the Kaiser-Wilhelm Institute. There was originated in this laboratory a process known as the Fischer-Tropch Process by which coal was first converted into "water gas" by the usual methods and then the water gas processed catalytically to form liquid fuel products. The Fischer-Tropch was controlled by the German Ruhr-Chemie interests who put up a considerable amount of private capital for its development but did not get very far with it. Shortly before the war the I. G. research organization attacked the same process and had somewhat better success. The combined Ruhr-Chemie and I. G. German developments were brought to this country just before the Second World War by an American syndicate.

THE CURRENT American program for converting coal into liquid fuel is complicated and perhaps favored by the economics of the natural gas market. The Pittsburgh coal fields, whch are among the most important in the country, lie in a region which has been accustomed to use natural gas in great quantities as a domestic and industrial fuel. The total natural gas demand in this same area in which our most important coal fields are located has become so great as to outstrip supply.

The gas market in this area was originally supplied by the Appalachian gas reserves which were considerable, but long ago it was necessary to supplement these local reserves by pipelines leading to the great gas field of the Southwest. Looking ahead, however, the transportation of greater and greater supplies of gas from the Southwestern fields to the consuming areas seems to run up against several limitations, among them the cost of transportation.

In the Southwest fields, natural gas has been, until very recently, facing a buyers' market and the owners of the gas have been willing to sell it, even on long-term contracts, for figures as low as 2 to 5 cents a thousand cubic feet. But on top of the greatly increasing requirements of the pipeline buyers for long-distance transportation, there has been another scientific development which completely changes the picture in the gas fields.

This development is an offshoot of the I. G. hydrogenation process and the Fischer-Tropch process. The net result is that the owner of natural gas in Texas or Kansas is now in a position to convert his gas into liquid fuel in the gas fields, and transport this liquid fuel to the consuming markets at a cost far less than the transportation of the gas itself. Two large plants involving an investment of nearly 40 million dollars are now being built to exploit this new technique.

THIS SITUATION creates a new opportunity for the coal industry. If coal can be economically converted into gas of a quality suitable for the present market, the demand will assure a new market for the coal fields near the gas consuming areas. This chain of interrelated technical and economic developments leads inevitably toward the conversion of the Appalachian coal into gasoline and other liquid fuels with simultaneous production of a synthetic substitute for natural gas.

There is a good foundation upon which to base an industry of this kind. The most important missing stone is the first step of converting the coal into water gas. We need for this purpose processing units which will handle thousands of tons of coal per day instead of tens or hundreds of tons.

The oil industry faced and solved similar problems in the application of catalytic conversion processes to the treatment of oil.

This is the type of imagination which is now being applied to the gasification of coal, and it may even be that the same "fluidized solid" technique can be used. When this has been accomplished, the coal mining industry in the Appalachian area will begin to take on part of the load of supplying gasoline and gas for these coal regions.

IN THE meantime, the mining of coal is itself trending toward more and more complete mechanization. The trend of the coal industry toward conversion of coal into supplementary supplies of gasoline and gas has an important bearing on this mine mechanization problem. If coal is to be converted into gas at the mine-mouth by some of the methods now envisaged, it will make little difference whether the coal is in lump form or in dust form, nor will the percentage of slate and dirt which contaminates the coal greatly affect its value for conversion purposes.

The prospect of a mine-mouth market for dirty coal in fine sizes has created increased interest in mechanical mining methods and continuous underground transportation methods. It would seem entirely possible from an engineering standpoint to mine coal from an underground face continuously in small particles and deliver these particles to the mine-mouth by a pneumatic conveyor system. There are expired patents on such systems, but the low value of dust coal has made them unattractive.

NO ONE can yet present a schedule for the commercial development of the coming industry of mine-mouth coal conversion. The basic economies look promising even now. The estimated investment costs for the production of gasoline and gas from coal compare favorably with present marginal costs of acquiring, developing, refining and transporting equivalent quantities of crude oil and natural gas. Probable conversion costs of coal seem slightly above present market levels of oil and natural gas, but if the existing oil and natural gas industries had to be wholly replaced at present labor and material costs the difference would disappear. National considerations of a military nature may have a bearing upon the rate of development of the new industry.

All that can now be said with certainty is that the trend of development of the coal industry runs toward mine-mouth conversion into synthetic oil and gas. The scientific background is already adequate, the engineering background is largely but not wholly complete, and the economic forecast is favorable.

Moscow Says Crops May Top Last Year's

Moscow, Jan. 29 (AP).—Moscow press reports indicated today that if favorable conditions continue the Soviet Union has a chance of beating last year's good grain crop.

The reports said winter grain crops have come through the first half of the winter very well. Hundreds of collective farms already are sowing spring wheat, barley and other crops.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Distant Drum

TO ANY sensible American, the devaluation of the French franc must seem as remote and without menace to us as was the eruption of Krakatoa. The events in Paris are regarded with deep alarm, however, in the small circle of men in Washington who understand such things. They are considered likely, in fact, to presage more general and much graver economic troubles, in the way that a distant drum-roll of thunder presages the coming storm.

The immediate practical effects which are most feared are an outbreak of competitive devaluation among the other European currencies, and a simultaneous drying up of the channels of trade. The signs already point that way. The Belgians, for example, are even now known to be considering following the French, with a devaluation of the Belgian franc. And the British, whose position is most seriously jeopardized, are also known to be considering requiring the French to pay in dollars for their more important purchases in areas under British control.

The American Treasury, the British Treasury, and the International Monetary Fund are organizing themselves to avert the worst of these dangers. But while such leaders in the effort as Camille Gutt, the able and courageous manager of the Monetary Fund, do their best to put a bold face on the situation, they clearly feel no assurance of success.

AS USUAL in monetary crises, the source of the main danger is highly technical. As part of its devaluation plan, the French government has insisted on establishing in Paris a free market for the dollar and other hard currencies. In this market, the dollar is considered likely to sell, initially, for from 300 to 400 francs.

At the same time, the French have established the official rate of 214 francs to the dollar at the Bank of France, and they have placed proportional official rates on the other European currencies. Thus the pound sterling, which is officially worth a fraction over $4, will be dealt in by the Bank of France at 862 francs to the pound. But anyone holding dollars can sell $100 on the free market for 35,000 francs (or thereabouts). And he can use these francs to get over 40 pounds sterling at the Bank of France, instead of the 25 pounds he would have got by changing his dollars for sterling directly.

The real value of the pound is thus undermined, and so will be the real value of every other soft currency in Europe. When confidence in values is thus attacked, hardly any form of currency controls however strict, can prevent flights from the currencies which are endangered. Furthermore, a trader can buy goods in London with his cheap French pounds and sell the same goods in New York for dollars, with a clear profit of over 50 per cent. This kind of unhealthy trading will naturally tend to replace normal commerce, since it will offer a safer, quicker return. And thus the kind of situation may arise which led to the great crisis of the early thirties, that drove the British to take sterling off gold, and was the real cause of putting Hitler in the Reich Chancellory.

THERE ARE the reasons, very crudely stated, why both competitive devaluation and a breakdown of normal trade are both feared in Europe. These are the reasons, also, why the experts of the International Monetary Fund, and the representatives of the British and American Treasuries, have pleaded with the French during recent days at least to abandon the free market feature of their devaluation plan.

Under the circumstances, it is pertinent to note that American leadership has shockingly failed in this vital matter. The French hinted to Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder as long ago as last September that they had something of the sort in mind. They officially informed our Treasury of their intentions more than a fortnight ago, long before they let the British in on the secret.

Either the significance of what was afoot was not understood by the American experts, or the Americans simply failed to make up their minds. At any rate, the American intervention to persuade the French to change their plan materialized only at the very last minute. A strong American protest a fortnight ago would almost certainly have been effective. When the protest was made the French were committed, and it was too late.

The worst of it is that this tardiness and indecision probably foreshadows the Washington reaction to the trouble which may well be ahead. Except for the French experts, no one seems to expect what has been done to benefit France in the long run. If the bottom drops out of the value of the franc in the free Paris market, France too will suffer. Meanwhile, a European monetary crisis may well occur, may spread outward into the rest of the world, and may become a general economic crisis. Yet with these storms quite possible ahead, and certain, if they come, to rock and batter us as well as everyone else, the hatches of our own ship are not battened down, and the lifeboats have not been provisioned for months.

The Gallup Poll

Meat Leads Group of Items Voters Favor Having Rationed

This is the second of two articles on public attitudes toward price control and rationing. The weight of voter opinion favors a return to governmental controls, it was shown in the first article. Today Dr. Gallup discusses the types of products the public wants controlled.

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 29—American voters who want the Government to re-impose rationing and price controls are worrying primarily about current meat prices and about predictions of tighter supplies of meat in the next few months.

As reported earlier this week, 51 per cent of American voters say they favor re-imposing rationing and price controls on certain items, while 41 per cent are opposed to any such steps and 8 per cent express no opinion.

The 51 per cent who approve new controls were asked to name the specific products they thought should be included. Meat by far led all other products in the number of mentions.

A bill recently introduced in the Senate by Ralph E. Flanders of Vermont would permit the President to set up machinery for meat rationing now and to submit a plan to Congress if he considered rationing called for.

Here is how the voters favoring rationing and price control listed the items needing regulation:

1. Meat
2. Butter
3. All foods, groceries
4. Bread, wheat, flour
5. Clothing, shoes
6. Eggs
7. Housing, rents
8. Milk
9. Gasoline, fuel oil
10. Lard, fats

Meat leads the column in all sections of the country, in all age and occupational groups, and even the farmers, who are in general opposed to rationing, list meat as the No. 1 inflationary bugaboo.

Behind the public's desire for meat controls lies a rapid rise in prices despite an all-time record production—156 pounds per capita in 1947. Forecasters see a sharp drop in production over the next few months since farmers have cut their herds due to high costs of feed grains. Senator Flanders' bill foresees a new spiral of meat prices unless rationing of dwindling supplies is put into effect.

The demand for a return to rationing and price control is strongest in the lower income groups. Voters who feel their incomes are less than is needed to get along on in their communities are more inclined to approve rationing than those who think their incomes are larger than minimum standards.

Short Line Wage Boost Favored

A presidential emergency board recommended yesterday the short-line railroad grant a 15½-cent-an-hour wage increase to nonoperating employes.

The recommendation is similar to a recent arbitration award for nonoperating employes of trunk line railroads.

The case involved a dispute between 18 short-line roads and 17 unions of nonoperating employes such as telegraphers and maintenance workers.

French Stunned by Withdrawal of 5000-Franc Notes

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Jan. 29 (NYHT).—A stunned French people waited tonight for the National Assembly's reaction to a government decree withdrawing from circulation about 66 million banknotes worth 5000 francs apiece and valued at more than one and a half billion dollars at the newly-established rate of exchange.

Premier Robert Schuman and Finance Minister Rene Mayer went before an all-night session of Parliament with this proposal some hours after Mayer had closed the banks and the stock exchange by decree and, in a public statement, had urged the people not to accept the notes as legal tender.

The man-in-the-street did as he was told—and hundreds of thousands of men and women found they could buy nothing with a 5000-franc bill.

But the deputies in the National Assembly were not so easily impressed by the government's claim that some such measure was necessary to fight inflation and stabilize the country's economy. The plan was to reduce the amount of money in circulation and thereby call a halt to rising prices. Some notes would be recalled—how many for each individual or concern the government would not say.

So a parliamentary battle quickly developed and the assembly's finance commission refused to back the government. Yesterday the same commission rejected the government's plan to open a free market for gold transactions.

With the Socialists objecting to the gold measure, it looked as if the government—which needs their support—might not stand.

Then at 2 o'clock this morning, to appease the Socialists, Schuman and Mayer closed the banks until Saturday and stopped circulation of large notes. Appeasement was only partly successful. Some Socialists felt that the government was at least going after hoarders and black market operators. Others, like former Premier Paul Ramadier, feared the effect of a law which could hurt working men as well.

The government refused to say whether it would redeem a few large notes or half of them. It merely stated that it would decide this important question later, by decree.

There was no question of confiscation, for bank accounts were not touched, banks were allowed to exchange all their 5000-franc notes, and there was talk of government bonds to cover the amounts the treasury failed to redeem in cash.

"Decrees will determine," said the draft law, "the conditions, forms and delays in which these notes will be withdrawn from circulation and the number that will be reimbursed."

On this article the Schuman-Mayer team ran into trouble. Enough deputies wanted to know the terms of these decrees to prevent a favorable vote in the finance commission. The vote was a 20-20 tie. Among the opposition votes were Communist representatives, many members from the extreme right of the chamber and scattered assemblymen in the center.

Legislator-Critic Turned 'Bureaucrat' Lauds Agency Staff

Up until last September, Jones was a GOP House member from Ohio and a member of its powerful Appropriations Committee. In that job, he was a sharp and effective critic of Federal agencies and their employes.

Then Jones took a $5000 annual cut in salary to become a member of the Federal Communications Commission. The transformation soon began to take place, and he watched the work of FCC employes. The other night he made a speech to the radio bar association. Jones had this to say:

"I want to pay tribute to the staff of the commission. They are the hardest working group I have seen. As a matter of fact, they spend so many hours around the place I would not blame their wives if they divorced them, and I'm surprised their families recognize them.

"The commissioners, my colleagues, work hard and long hours. Although we don't always agree, I'm glad they're not the kind of men who are disagreeable because we don't agree. Frankly, I had misgivings before I came: but I'm glad to say they were unfounded."

The commissioner made his speech in good taste and good humor. He kidded hmiself for making the change from legislator to "bureaucrat." FCC employes can be sure of this—that they have a powerful friend in Commissioner Jones.

NOTES: Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) has replaced SENATOR TAFT (R., Ohio) as a member of the Senate conferees on the retirement bill. The conferees will meet Tuesday . . . CARROLL K. SHAW has been named director of National Labor Relations' administratve division. He will report to General Counsel Robert N. Denham. Shaw has been an investigator for the Joint Congressonal Committee on Taxation . . . ED WARNER, a former member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, is the latest person to be mentioned for the CAB chairmanship. He's the United States representative on the International Aviation Organization.

SLASHES? The big independent offices appropriation bill will be reported to the House today by its appropriations committee. A number of reductions are slated to be made in the President's request for funds for the 30-odd independent agencies covered by the bill. Full details on the bill will appear here tomorrow.

The committee is working on a rider that would order the withholding of salaries of those war service employes who are holding jobs that could be filled by displaced career people. A committee member said, however, that the rider would be placed on a later bill.

Meantime, the House committee is making a study of all war service and temporary jobs.

In making layoffs under the House bill, the committee can be expected to insist that a proportionate share of the reductions be made among higher-salaried employes and officials.

DCEs: The congressional pressure on Civil Service to find jobs for laid-off career employes can be expected to force the commission to alter its so-called DCE program again.

The commission had planned to scrap the program in about a month. By that time it had hoped to find jobs for the vast majority of the DCEs (displaced career employes). But an average of 55 new laid-off career people is being added to its list each week, and the last report showed that the number of DCEs had increased to 767. Now Civil Service has decided to push ahead on its program.

A check yesterday by Civil Service indicated that layoff notices have been given to about 400 war service and temporary people here within the past several days. These notices will become effective on February 20. The 400 are in jobs that Civil Service believes can be filled by DCEs. Civil Service is confident that the agencies will hire 400 DCEs to fill the jobs when they are vacated.

RFC: The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has warned about 150 employes, mainly in its accounting division, that they will be laid off in the near future. The accounting work is being shifted to the agency's branch offices. Other layoffs will be made gradually.

LABOR: New officers of Labor's American Federation of Government Employes lodge are: Charles F. Sharkey, president; Donald C. Roden, vice president; Sophronia M. Elmer, secretary; Joseph W. Lethco, treasurer, and Walter W. Schneider, sergeant-at-arms.

2 Area Pupils Cited In Talent Search

Two Greater Washington students have been awarded honorable mention citations in the seventh annual Science Talent Search, the Westinghouse Electric Corporation announced yesterday. They are:

John Reed, 17, of 6637 Barnaby st. nw., a senior at Woodrow Wilson High School, who submitted an essay on geology.

Morton D. Willcutts, jr., 17, of 7119 Hampden lane, Bethesda, a senior at Georgetown Preparatory School, who submitted an essay on the atomic bomb.

Coast Guard to the Rescue . . .

DAMAGED BUOYS REMOVED—Men of the Coast Guard cutter Madrona adjust gear on two channel-marking buoys which they picked out of the Potomac after the floating lights had been damaged by ice. They will be repaired and replaced

The Washington Post

"THANKS FOR THE LIFT"—Removed from the ice-threatened lighthouse at Upper Cedar Point, Md., yesterday, members of the lighthouse crew reach the Madrona in the cutter's small boat. They are (fom left) Carpenter's Mate 1/c James B. Ligon, Boatswain's Mate 1/c Richard J. Wessells and Foreman 1/c William Flemming

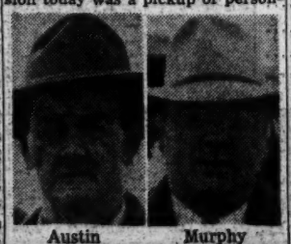
Cutter Plows to River Lights, Takes Keepers From Ice Threat

Linwood Hudgins of Portsmouth, Va., handles his crew of 34.

Wind and tide left but few reaches of open water, only one of them in the lighthouse areas. Ebb tides carry the thick ice sheath out, then bring it back in double and triple thicknesses. In some stretches, it is possible to walk a quarter-mile to shore.

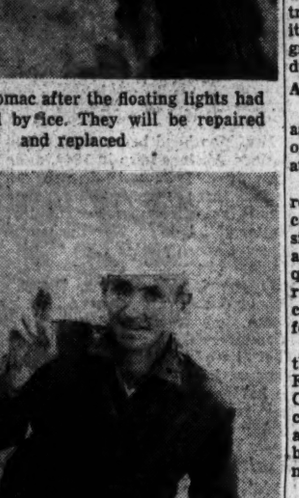
Pickup at 3 Points

The Coast Guard vessel's mission today was a pickup of personnel on lighthouses at Maryland Point, 14 miles south of Quantico, the Madrona's temporary home port; at Upper Cedar Point, 4 miles downstream, and at Mathias Point, near the haze-distorted Morgantown bridge.



Austin

Murphy



It nosed cautiously into a thick ice shelf off Maryland Point light, the echo sounding equipment ticking a reassuring 18 feet under the keel. A small boat was put over, chose the only free lane through the ice and came off with the two keepers.

Fifty-year-old George W. Austin of Cape Hatteras, N. C., clambered up the Jacob's ladder, pinked up by the cold, but grinning.

He walked ashore once in the last few days for provisions, but shifting ice has thinned the path. He's had three years of Potomac lighthouse duty; 30 in the service. "this," he observed, "is the worst I've ever seen."

With him was Clayton Murphy, 46, of Beaufort, N. C., a 20-year veteran who is having his first vacation due to weather.

Going Solely by Compass

Pushing on toward Upper Cedar Point, the going was solely by compass. Ice has buried some of the channel-marking buoys; nudged others out of place as much as a half mile. Damaged ones, chopped out for repairs, were piled on the ship's buoy deck.

Potomac ice floes weren't particularly impressive to First Class Boatswain's Mate Richard J. Wessells of Bloxom, Va., who got his winters the hard way—on the Minot Light off Boston.

Wessells and two of his crew were taken off the Cedar Point lighthouse by the Madrona's small boat, but the rescuing ship's crew had to clamber over 25 yards of jumbled ice cakes to carry in an emergency light.

With Wessells were William Fleming, 19, of Boston and James B. Ligon of Asheville, N. C.

The keeper didn't scoff at our version of a clogged river; merely told of New England winters offshore. He was the last keeper before Minot was turned into a mechanical device.

Tough Duty for Day

The Mathias light gave the Madrona its tough duty for the day. The ice stacked too closely around the steel legs; the mother ship couldn't find enough water, and a small boat couldn't get through.

Keeper John C. Lewis of Owens, Va.; Edwin B. Midgett of Oceana, Va., and James M. Carter of Big Stone Gap, Va., used their own dory for a solution—and a sled Secured to a line from the Coast Guard ship, their dory was pulled across the ice, then pulled back with the emergency light. The Madrona hove to, 50 feet away, hoping for a wind change that would clear away ice sufficiently to take the men off.

They declined the invitation to warmth and the Coast Guard ship's excellent food—"if you'll just send over our leave papers."

The papers went over by hand line.

Sex Penalties Doubled in Proposed Law

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Heavier penalties for sex offenses against children is expected to be recommended today by a House District Subcommittee.

The subcommittee has called District Attorney George Morris Fay for final approval of its legislation, which is expected to:

1. Double punishment for indecent exposure in the presence of children under the age of 16. The new penalties are expected to provide jail terms of six months, a fine of $500 or both. At present, the penalty is 90 days or not more than $250.

2. Provide a new law against persons taking indecent liberties with children under 16 or enticing them to a place for the purpose of taking indecent liberties. For taking the liberties, the penalty recommended is expected to be 10 years. Enticement will probably carry a jail term of five years.

Chairman A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) of the Public Health, Education and Recreation subcommittee has invited the Judiciary subcommittee to sit with it in an executive session this morning to consider the measures.

To further tighten the sex offense laws, it is expected that the present law against soliciting will specifically forbid it in hotels, bus terminals, Union Station, theaters, museums and public buildings.

The subcommittee is expected also to make soliciting of children subject to a heavier penalty, such as that contemplated for enticing them into sexual acts.

A threatened crackdown by Montgomery County health officials on violators of laws governing installation of septic tanks led yesterday to a $50 fine against James Kane, of Silver Spring, in Rockville Police Court.

$30 March of Dimes Cash Taken by Thief

D. C. Eases Liquor Sale Restriction

Ban Within 400 Feet Of Church, School May Be Waived In Business Zones

The Commissioners yesterday approved an amendment that will make it possible for liquor to be sold within 400 feet of schools and churches in commercial or industrial zoned areas.

The change had the approval of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the corporation counsel's office. It was made without public hearing.

Originally, the regulations stated that a license could not be issued for sale of liquor within a 400-foot radius from a school or church.

At the discretion of the ABC Board, this restriction can now be waived when "the main street entrance of the school . . . or church itself is actually on or occupies ground zoned commercial or industrial."

Asked for Restaurant

The change in regulations was asked by attorney for a restaurant on T st., between 6th and 7th sts., at the corner of Wiltberger st. nw.

The ABC Board had denied the restaurant a liquor license because of a church on the north side of Florida ave. The church auditorium is more than the required 400 feet from the restaurant, but the entrance to the church is slightly less than 400 feet away.

The attorneys pointed out to the Commissioners that most of Florida ave. east of 7th st. to N. Capitol st. is strip-zoned commercial. Which means that Florida ave. itself is zoned commercial but the property in back of it is not.

Mrs. Agnes Mason, a member of the ABC Board, said "very few places will be affected" by the amendment.

However, some school and church authorities expressed surprise and a certain amount of disapproval of the change.

Would Know More About It

"I will have to know more about it," said Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, "but in general I would say if liquor establishments are brought any closer to schools than they are now it would be very unfortunate."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, said: "We will continue to protest whenever we consider the granting of licenses will be a hazard to children." She observed that the Board of Education has always found the "ABC Board anxious to cooperate."

Arthur Flemming, Civil Service Commissioner and president of the Federation of Churches, said the tee would consider the matter at its regular meeting next Tuesday night.

"Personally," he said, "I would regard it as an unfortunate modification of th eregulations."

Independent Drunk Clinic Recommended

An independent District alcoholic clinic directed by a $10,000-a-year doctor directly responsible t othe Commissioners was recommended yesterday by the Commissioners' Advisory Committee on the Alcoholic Clinic.

The committee said the clinic should be located, if possible, in Government-owned space naer the center of the city, but not in a hospital, clinic or correctional institution.

The clinic should not be made a part of the Health, Welfare or Corrections Departments or a court agency, until experience indicated under which it would serve the "general best interest," the committee declared.

Clinic Provided in Law

Operation of the clinic under the Health Department originally was favored by the Commissioners

These recommendations were contained in a 23-page report presented to the Commissioners yesterday by Col. El Goring Bliss, chairman of the six-member citizens' committee.

The committee was appointed November 5 to advise the city heads on setting up the alcoholic clinic authorized by Congress last year in the Hebert Act.

The act provides that persons determined by Municipal Court judges to be chronic alcoholics may be committed to the clinic for up to 90 days' treatment in lieu of jail sentence.

A 10 per cent increase in liquor license fees was authorized to support the clinic. Alan W. Payne, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, told the Commissioners more than $75,000 has been taken in so far this year for this purpose.

City Heads Land Report

Commissioners John Russell Young and Guy Mason called the report "a very good one" and praised the committee for its work.

Mason said the report would be forwarded to Budget Officer Walter Fowler to prepare job specifications for the director's post. Both Mason and Colonel Bliss agreed it would be difficult to obtain a qualified man for the salary offered.

The committee recommended the director be a doctor who is either a specialist in psychiatry or has had two years' experience in psychiatry. He also should have "some specific experience in the handling of alcoholic patients," the committee felt.

Mason said the citizens' committee would submit a list of candidates assembled during its two-month study.

Trial Board Will Clear Murphy of All Charges, Close Observers Say

4-Room Apartment Tenancy Causes 3-Way Action in Court

The Washington Post

GET LANDLADY ON "THE MAT"—Mrs. Isabelle Melia (left), 25, and Sophia Niemiec, 20, both Navy Department employes examine the complaint they filed at the Corporation Counsel's Office yesterday against their landlady, Mrs. Mildred Watkins of 914 Hamilton st. nw. The G-Girls charge that they pay $110 a month rent for one unfurnished apartment, where the rent ceiling should be $65

A four-room apartment without bath was the object of a three-way legal fight here yesterday.

Participants were two Government girls, the apartment owner and a woman who has leased the property and wants the girls evicted.

Round One—the eviction suit is scheduled to come up at 10 a. m. today in Landlords and Tenants Court.

Wants Apartment for Self

In it Wanda Frank, 1540 Maryland ave. ne., who says she has leased the property at 914 Hamilton st. nw., is seeking eviction of Miss Sophie Niemic, 20, and Mrs. Isabel E. Melia, both employes of the Bureau of Naval Personnel, so she can use their apartment herself.

The two girls, meanwhile, swore out a criminal warrant against Mrs. Mildred O. Watkins, 5108 3d st. nw., owner of the property, charging her with violation of the Rent Control Act.

They claim Mrs. Watkins rented them the apartment, and that they paid her $110 a month as rent for 11 months, without Mrs. Watkins ever having applied for a rent ceiling as required by the law.

Ceiling Set Jan. 8

A $65 ceiling—$45 lower than what they have been paying—was set January 8 after the girls questioned the Rent Control Administration about their payments, Milton Mendell, their attorney, said.

He said the entire house had rented for $60 a month before Mrs. Watkins purchased it, but that she had converted it into four apartments.

Year's Deficit Is $81,204.45 In Alexandria

Alexandria City Council overexpended its 1947 budget by $1,082,614.47, but ended the year with a deficit of only $81,204.45.

Col. Everett A. Hellmuth, chairman of council's finance committee, said yesterday tax receipts for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1947, exceeded the budget estimate by $161,265.75. This had the effect of reducing the overexpenditure to $921,348.72.

Special Appropriations

In September, after a warning from the auditing firm of Ernst & Ernst, Council wrote off the books $234,757.88 in unspent special appropriations — funds for projects not anticipated in the budget. Though this had the effect of reducing overexpenditures to $686,590.84, the entire sum was still carried on the books as an expenditure.

Of the remaining figure, $532,363.10 represents special appropriations for capital improvements, which Hellmuth said can be met by a bond issue. This figure includes appropriations made in previous years, he said, which were actually spent in 1947.

Appropriations of this sort made and spent in 1947 include $100,446.93 for school sites, $55,864.92 for a new Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court building, $51,360.30 for other municipal sites.

This left an overexpenditure, on budgeted appropriations, of $154,227.74. However, some departments show unexpanded balances at the end of the year to bring the deficit to $81,204.45.

The council will meet tonight at 7:30 p. m. to set up its revenue structure for 1948.

The teacher was Miss Mabel Pierpont, 59, of 6520 6th st. nw. She had been a teacher here for 31 years, her last teaching assignment being at Anacostia High School.

A petition for probate of her will which was filed yesterday in District Court showed that except for several minor items her entire estate will be placed in trust for an invalid brother, Russell H. Pierpont.

The will directs that upon the brother's death, $25,000 be given the Daughters of the American Revolution and $5000 to Columbia Hospital. The remainder is to be shared equally among the Salvation Army, the Central Union Mission and the Gospel Mission.

ABC Considers Renewing License For Food Shop

The District's Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement the case of Reno Food's Shop—and 9th st.—after hearing witnessses defend the shop and the street.

Citizens, led by the Mid-City Citizens' Association, have protested renewal of the liquor license of the shop, 929-931 9th st. nw., on grounds it and 9th st. were frequented by drunks.

At a continuance of the hearings yesterday, John Milliarakins, head of the firm, two of his waitresses, Mrs. Ida McKibban and Miss Ruby Goodman, and a woman news vendor, all denied dranks were served in the establishment.

The news vendor, Mrs. Maude M. Jones, 65, of 315 I st. ne., said the drunks along 9th st. got that way, not in the Reno Food's Shop, but from bottles of alcoholic mixturse imbibed along the sidewalk.

No 'Punishment' Looked for Beyond Possible Rebuke On His Language

Fire Chief Clement Murphy is expected to be cleared of all serious charges against him when a decision in his trial on "demoralization" counts is announced today.

The three-man civilian trial board's verdict in the case will be made at 10:30 a. m. today at Municipal Center.

No "punishment" of Murphy is expected beyond the possibility of a reprimand on minor charges of "abusive language," close observers in the case said.

In addition, it is believed likely that Murphy may be directed to "sit down" with his subordinates and work out a personnel rotation program which will be generally acceptable.

A charge that Murphy's personnele rotation system lowered Fire Department efficiency constitutes the broadest of nine charges agains tthe fire chief which were aired during 11 days of testimony.

Murphy was charged under the general specification of "inefficiency and unfitness." In addition to the rotation system, other counts listed in the charges included two counts of intoxication, improper use of an ambulance, and five counts of harsh language.

It is possible that Murphy may be reprimanded for some of the language counts which he has admitted in part, stating a belief that the language was only emphasis necessary to "spur on" his men at fires.

The charges against Murphy have been before the public in various forms since last June, when Capt. Joseph W. Conroy, who heads the local firefighters union, charged Murphy with "demoralization."

Conroy declared, before the Murphy trial began, that he did not believe Murphy would be convicted because, Conroy said, the charges as issued failed to cover all allegations against the fire chief.

District Commissioner John Russell Young stated after Conroy made his allegations that if they were not borne out in trial proceedings, Conroy himself would face charges.

Tax Unit Lays 3000 Frauds to Nimro

Revenue Bureau Says It Expects to Get Back 2 Million

Tax Consultant Bernard P. Nimro prepared more than 3000 reportedly fraudulent income tax returns for 1000 Washington clients between 1941 and 1946, the Bureau of Internal Revenue charged yesterday.

The allegation meant more headaches for Nimro, who was convicted of embezzlement in District Court Tuesday and now faces a maximum sentence of 20 years as well as a $2000 fine.

Disclosure of that number of frauds will mean headaches for the clients, too. A spokesman for the Bureau of Internal Revenue said the Government expects to collect about two million dollars in tax payments and penalties. Some of the clients also face prosecution, the spokesman added.

The Bureau spokesman said most of the returns were falsified with large deductions for fictitious traveling expenses. In hundreds of cases, he said, gross incomes of $12,000 to $15,000 were reduced to between $2000 and $5000 by this means.

Nimro, 45, with offices at 1614 K st. nw., was convicted by a District Court jury Tuesday of embezzling $2628.26 from a State Department official, Loy W. Henderson, chief of the Near East Division.

The intruders had wrestled a 500-pound safe into an alley in the rear of the shop, but were forced to abandon it after unsuccessful attempts to pry it open. Ethridge said it wouldn't have made any difference; there was no money in the safe.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—Action on the establishment of an inter-Lutheran postgraduate seminary at Chicago, Ill., will hinge henceforth on a move by one or more of the church bodies affiliated with the National Lutheran Council, following council action here today.

The executive committee of the council, which is holding its thirtieth annual meeting here, drafted a statement on the proposed seminary for consideration by the council. In considering a statement today, the council voted to submit the matter to the eight participating bodies as "information."

Further development of the project now hinges on the initiation of action by one or more of the church bodies, the council said.

The proposed seminary resulted in a sharp difference of opinion here earlier this week as the council debated the matter.

In other action today the council discussed the displaced persons problem and set a goal of four million dollars for Lutheran world action in 1949. The world action section of the council is engaged in relief and reconstruction work in Europe and Asia.

Amateur Hockey Team Will Represent U.S. In Olympics; Brundage's Team Out in Cold

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Blue Plate Special

BASEBALL DEPT.—The American League ought to be beaming today in the direction of Joe Tinker, the old Cubs' star, who has just given the A. L. a big deal in the selection of his all-time, all-star major league team. The old National Leaguer, famed front man of the Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance trio, allots seven of the positions to the American League.

POVICH

He picks Walter Johnson and Ed Walsh as his pitchers; Johnny Kling and Roger Bresnahan as catchers; George Sisler at first base; Tony Lazzeri at second; Honus Wagner at short; Jimmy Collins at third, and the standard all-star outfield of Ruth, Cobb and Speaker.

Thus only at catching and shortstop does Tinker honor National Leaguers. But even the American League ought to blush at his selection of Tony Lazzeri at second base. Honest American Leaguers can hardly rate Lazzeri with Rogers Hornsby, the National Leaguer who compiled a lifetime batting average of .358. Even in the face of Hornsby's shocking weakness at going back on pop flies, he was a stand-out.

If the American League had a second baseman to compare with Hornsby, it was Nap Lajoie or Eddie Collins, not Lazzeri. But the National League can gripe also at Tinker's third-base selection of Jimmy Collins, of the Red Sox. Hadn't he ever heard of Pie Traynor of the Pirates?

BASKETBALL DEPT.—The Washington Caps are taking dead aim on the league-leading Chicago Stags, who move into Uline arena tomorrow night. The Caps have a revenge motive, and have been aching for this crack at the Stags, the team which unceremoniously thumped them out of last season's title play-off.

The contest promises to break the arena attendance record of 6751 hung up earlier in the month when Joe Fulks and his Philadelphia Warriors took that 106-99 overtime beating from the Caps.

An individual battle will be all wrapped up in Saturday night's proceedings. Bones McKinney, the Caps' character and favorite of arena fans, will be meeting up again with Chuck Gilmur, who handcuffed McKinney so effectively in the play-offs.

The Stags don't boast any such scoring ace as Joe Fulks, but they do have in Max Zaslofsky, the runner-up. To Freddie Scolari will go the job of covering Zaslofsky, and the Caps' fans doubt if it could be in better hands.

OLYMPIC DEPT.—The international good will of which the Olympic people always prate and usually foul up, is getting a going-over this year even before the Olympics get under way. The United States hockey groups with their bickering in Switzerland have split the Olympic nations into warring camps.

The pity is that the United States hockey factions could not have settled their squabble before going to Switzerland where they are now in the absurd position of having two teams ready to represent the country. Avery Brundage, head of the United States Olympic Committee, is threatening to withdraw all the United States winter teams unless his A. A. U.-sponsored group is designated as the official contender. The Swiss recognize only the United States Amateur Hockey Federation team, which Brundage charges is tinged with commercialism. And the International Olympic Committee says, in effect, "a plague on both your houses," and wants to eliminate them both from the hockey competition.

To the man in the street, the simplest solution of the current nonsense quickly recommends itself. Let the two United States hockey teams meet on the ice before the games, and send the loser home.

STATE REVENUE DEPT.—For months now, there have been rumblings that boxing, as a revenue producer for the State of New York, has been getting the fish-eye from factions in the legislature and that there may be a bill to kill the whole business of legalized boxing.

The State treasury's report of yesterday is no comfort to the pro-boxing people. The report shows that New York, which in 1946 derived $332,924 from State taxes on boxing, profited by only $194,033 during 1947. It was a slump of more than $107.000.

Boxing, despite all the furore it creates in New York, plus the district attorney's investigation into fixes, bribes and scoundrelly managers, doesn't quite stack up as a big business for the State. It's significant to recall that out of four good days' betting at a race track, the State can derive more in taxes than from a year's legalized boxing in New York.

Wilkinson Withdraws As Candidate For Navy Job

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The list of candidates for the Navy coaching post was reduced by one yesterday when Oklahoma Coach Charles (Bud) Wilkinson announced his withdrawal from consideration.

At Norman, Dr. George L. Cross, president of the university, said Wilkinson would remain at Oklahoma, according to the Associated Press.

Sauer Still in Field

At the moment, George Sauer, coach at Kansas, still was in the field.

Wilkinson's decision came as a surprise. Earlier this week he conferred with authorities at the academy. Capt. Tom Hamilton, outgoing coach who steps up as athletic director in June, met him at National Airport and Wilkinson was closeted with the Navy braid for several hours on Tuesday.

Wilkinson, who steered the Sooners to the Big Six cochampionship last season, declined to comment about his talk either before he left Washington or when he returned to Oklahoma Wednesday night.

Sauer, 37-year-old former All-Ameriman at Nebraska and, like Wilkinson, a former naval officer who served aboard the aircraft carrier Enterprise, also had nothing to say last night at Lawrence, Kans.

Regarded as Challenging Setup

Before leaving here, Sauer admitted that he "still was interested" in the Navy post after his interview which followed the same pattern as Wilkinson's.

Insiders felt last night that civilian coaches may be shying away from the Navy post for two reasons:

1. The rigorous schedule without the material needed to cope with it.

2. The thought that the Navy braid, after departing from the custom of having an officer-coach, might not be too tolerant, if Hamilton's successor doesn't make good quickly.

The Midshipmen next season engage California, Cornell, Duke Missouri, Penn, Notre Dame, Michigan, Columbia and Army.

Joe Maniaci Named St. Louis U. Coach

St. Louis, Jan. 29 (AP).—Joseph Maniaci, former Chicago Bears halfback, was appointed head football coach at St. Louis University tonight, to succeed Dukes Duford, who resigned at the close of last season.

Terms of Maniaci's contract were not announced. More than 60 condidates were considered for the post before the announcement of Maniaci's appointment was made by the athletic council.

This will be Maniaci's first college assignment. He coached the Bainbridge, Md., team to 17 victories and a mythical all-Navy title during the war. Last year he coached the Paterson, N. J., club of the American Professional Football League. The team won the Eastern Division title.

Nine Nations Launch Play; Awards Are Left in Doubt

By John B. McDermott

St. Moritz, Jan. 30 (Friday) (U.P.).—Otto Mayer, secretary of the International Olympic Committee, said today that all nine nations entered in hockey competition would play as scheduled and let the committee decide at the end of the winter games whether to award the winning team official Olympic medals.

The hockey competition start today.

The announcement by Mayer meant that the team representing the Amateur Hockey Association would compete for the United States since it was officially designated as the American entery by the Swiss Organizing Committee and the International Ice Hockey Federation.

It meant also that the American team championed by Avery Brundage, chairman of the United States Olympic Committee, would be forced to sit on the sidelines.

Bitterest Olympic Controversy

Although the I. O. C. worked out the arrangement for the nine teams to compete, it was still unable to reach any agreement in the bitterest controversy in Olympic history.

A special three-man committee remained in session long past midnight with representatives of the International Ice Hockey Federation but no solution was worked out.

Maybe said only that the session was a hot one and that "they failed to reach any agreement."

Later, Frit Kraatz, president of the Ice Hockey Federation, said that his group "will not change its decision and will follow the Olympic program as laid out."

"Act as Sportsmen"

Kraatz appealed to the Olympic committee to "admit your mistake right now and act as sportsmen."

"You will gain the respect of all sportsmen in the world," he said.

Enrico Celio, president of Switzerland, told the committee that he hoped "good sportsmanship and the spirit of peace" would prevail during the games.

However, there was little to either during the story meeting in which the loud voice of M. J. Sigfrid Edstroem, president of the I. O. G., could be heard through the door of the swank Hotel Kulm suite. On one occasion Edstroem pounded the conference table with his cane as charges were hurled back and forth.

After Lapse of 12 Years

Today in an ice arena that holds barely 6,000 an Olympic torch will be lighted against the background of the majestic Alps and after a lapse of 12 years caused by the war the games will be on.

The Fourth Winter Games were in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, in 1936 when Hitler paraded his military might at the side of the arena and stiff Nazi salutes jarred on democratic sensibilities.

The hockey wrangle began began when the International Federation threw out the Amateur Athletic Union as American governing body of the sport and installed the A. H. A. The International Olympic Committee refused to recognize this action.

Today's Program

St. Moritz, Switzerland, Jan. 29 (AP).—Tomorrow's opening day program at the fifth winter Olympic games (all times are Eastern standard).:

4 a. m.—Opening ceremony, followed by hockey matches on Olympic stadium ice.

7 a. m.—Two-man bobsled.

Terps, L. S. U. Box Tonight At Maryland

Maryland's boxers go Tiger hunting tonight and the feeling among Old Liner partisans is that the Terrapins will not only emerge unclawed, but also with a victory over the Bengals from Louisiana State University.

The first of the eight bouts at Ritchie Coliseum goes on at 8:30 o'clock and another capacity house, around 5500, is expected to be on hand for the ocassion.

Nosed out, 4½ to 3½, by Army at West Point, Maryland has scored over Catholic U. and South Carolina and also whipped Michigan State in the Sugar Bowl boxing feature. LSU, meanwhile, dropped Idaho, last year's collegiate champions, in its only outing this season.

The feature of the card comes early—the second bout of the evening which pits Maryland's Andy Quattrocchi against LSU's captain and lightweight, Doug Ellwood. Both are rated among the best in collegiate ranks and it's entirely possible that their skirmish tonight will be a preview of the Nationals.

The pairings:

125-POUND—Wilbert Moss, LSU, vs. Al Saikowski.

130-POUND—Doug Ellwood, LSU, vs. Andy Quattrocchi.

135-POUND—Gabe Junonville or Buddy Bourgeois, LSU, vs Barney Lincoln.

145-POUND—Pete Dorsey, LSU, vs. Roland Hyde.

175—POUND—Maurice Wilkinson, LSU, vs. Walt Lindquist.

HEAVYWEIGHT—Jim Claitor or Jim Bowes, LSU, vs. Ken Malone.

Douglas Leads Tucson Open

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 29 (AP).—Lanky Dave Douglas, Wilmington, Del., found the cold desert weather to his liking today and posted a 7-under-par 63 to set the pace in the first round of the $10,000 Tucson Open Golf Tournament.

After a shaky start, the lesser-known pro settled down to par busting on the fifth hole and played the same type golf that enabled him to defeat Ryder Cup players Herman Keiser and Jimmy Demaret in a playoff in the last Orlando, Fla., Open.

Most of the field of 154 found below-freezing temperatures registered throughout most of the morning a tough obstacle to overcome, but their golf improved after they made the turn and the sun's rays became stronger.

Bobby Locke finished with a 67 while Jimmy Demaret had to be content with a 1-over-par 71.

Cranford Is Early 8-5 Choice Over Gino in Garden Tonight

By Jack Hand

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—If Jackie Cranford deserves to mix with "name" heavyweights, he must stop Italy's Gino Buonvino tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

The 10-round battle between the Washington, D. C., stylist and roly poly Gino from Bari will not cause Joe Louis to lose sleep. But it will determine the future of the two young men involved.

Cranford, a standup boxer with apparent class, made amends for 1946 failures by recent wins, including a two-round knockout of Bernie Reynolds on January 2. Seven straight victories have led him up to Buonvino. The next step may be Joe Baksi.

Unbeaten to Date

The busy Bari body puncher arrived in this country a year ago, unencumbered by any Italian championship. He received little buildup and started banging away in the smaller clubs. To date he is unbeaten. Only a draw with Herbie Katz mars his record in nine fights.

Shortly before Cranford flattened Reynolds, Buonvino outslugged Gene Gosney of Seminole, Okla., in a companion ten on an all-heavy-weight card. Built like a smaller edition of Tony Galento, Gino turned out to be a strange type of heavyweight. He keeps punching constantly, shakes off punishment and always is busy.

There is no explosive kayo wallop in Buonvino's fists. There also is a suspicion that his bulging midriff mght not absorb too many stiff right hand shots.

Whether Cranford, protecting himself from the busy Italian, can dig enough straight rights to the body or pile up enough points with his educated left, makes the fight interesting. The trade likes Cranford with early odds making him a 5 to 8 favorite.

Will He Hear Bell?

The crowd of 15,000, expected to pay about $60,000 with $10 tops, will not be heard by Buonvino, who is deaf. Quartered in the Bronx, Gino does his training at a neighborhood gym, far from Stillman's. He always is accompanied by his father, Gino, sr., who was a chef at Bari before he came to this country.

Although Buonvino-Cranford tops the show, that bout that is drawing a good share of the gate is the eight-round semi between Terry Young of New York's East Side and Paddy Demarco, a Brooklyn boy. As Demarco will not be 20 until mid-February, he is not allowed to fight more than eight rounds in New York State. Otherwise it would be a cofeatured 10.

If Young gets past Demarco, another small club grad, he probably will be matched with Ike Williams in a lightweight title bout at the Garden, February 27. The Twentieth Century Sporting Club is holding that date open for Williams.

McIlwain Wins Novice Title

Harold McIlwain, 6-foot 6 giant from the 12th Street YMCA scored a first round knockout over Bill Lehman, Naval Medical Center, last night to capture the novice heavyweight championship of the Golden Gloves Tournament.

A Uline capacity crowd of more than 6000 saw the 240-pound McIlwain start using his superior reach on 190-pound Lehman from the opening gong. A right to the jaw sent Lehman down for a seven count after a minute of milling. It was a left to the jaw that finished him.

Ken Farrow, Merrick Boys Club was chosen outstanding novice fighter of the tournament when he won by a two-round TKO over Bob Paulhus, Andrews Field, in the 135-pound finals.

Novice Division

118-POUND CLASS—Dick Jiminey (Merrick) decisioned Ray Axt (Quantico).

'Gator Causes Ducks to Go Way Of Hialeah Bucks

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—The mystery of the disappearing ducks was solved at Hialeah Race Track today. A three-foot alligator was trapped in the infield lake.

Joe Morrow, superintendent of grounds, was disturbed over reports that baby ducks were disappearing, feet first and wings flapping, beneath the water. Morrow was afraid that the bigger pink flamingos would disappear, too.

A constant watch was set up, and the 'gator's eyes were spotted by reflection at night. Morrow had a wooden box trap made and baited.

Today the bait enticed the intruder and he was hauled out of the lake. The saurian is a prisoner now. The flamingos and ducks are safe.

Bullets Meet Caps Tonight In Baltimore

Starting tonight against the Bullets in Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory, the Washington Capitols face a week-end of opportunity.

If the Caps can make it four in a row over Baltimore, and then crack down on the Chicago Stage at Uline Arena Saturday evening, the Western Division race of the Basketball Association of America will be thrown into a virtual tie among Washington, Chicago and St. Louis.

WESTERN DIVISION	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
Chicago	16	9	.640
St. Louis	17	11	.607	½
WASHINGTON	16	11	.593	1
Baltimore	16	14	.533	2½
EASTERN DIVISION
Philadelphia	15	14	.517
New York	15	14	.517
Boston	14	16	.467	1½
Providence	4	24	.141	10½

Prior to last night's Chicago-St. Louis game, the Caps were in third place, one game behind the first-place Stage and only one half length behind St. Louis.

Although all three games with the Bullets have been faily close, the Caps haven't experienced too much trouble against their intercity rivals. The pattern of their games is usually touch-and-go for the first three quarters with Washington pulling away for keeps in the last period.

This may be good for the spectators, but Cap Coach Red Auerbach can't stand too much of it and wants to see his hotshots vault into the lead from the tap-off and stay there all the way.

The game has been switched to the Armory to accomodate the 7500 fans who will not only be seeing Grade A basketball, but also contributing to Baltimore's Mile-O-Dimes fund.

In addition to the game, a full program of entertainment has been scheduled to go on before, between and after the game. Approximately 1000 Washingtonians will accompany the Caps.

Reds Answer Miller's Blast By Offering to Trade Him

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Warren Giles, president of the Cincinnati Reds and his manager, Johnny Neun, said tonight that they were willing to trade Shortstop Eddie Miller to any other National League Club.

The pair, in town for the circuit's annual meeting tomorrow, made this known in a joint statement.

"We have discussed the Eddie Miller situation thoroughly and are announcing to all National League clubs at meeting Friday that Miller's contract is available to any club in the National League."

Miller recently was quoted as criticizing the ability of a number of his teammates. He said he thought the club "will be lucky to battle for a tie for last place."

Georgia Girls In Semifinals

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Curtis Cup team members Louise Suggs and Dorothy Kirby, both of Atlanta, Ga., and two Miamians advanced to the semifinals of the Helen Lee Doherty challenge cup golf tournament today.

Miss Kirby knocked off Mrs. Eddie Bush of Wilmington, Del., 3 and 2.

The petite Miss Suggs, who says her game is not quite up to what it was when she took the National Amateur, won handily, 5 and 4, from Carol Diringer of Tiffin, Ohio.

The toughest match of the sunny day was between Mrs. Charles Harting of Miami and Jean Hopkins of Cleveland, Ohio. The tall, blonde Ohio girl whose drives were averaging better than 225 yards down the middle, lost one up on the twentieth hole when her putt of 2½ feet rimmed the cup. She went one over as Mrs. Harting sunk in regulation figures.

Miss Evelyn Odom of Garden City, Long Island, turned back Mrs. Walter Reynolds of New York City, 2 and 1.

Clark and Hoover Address Group

Top Sports Figures, Writers, Broadcasters Here Monday to Aid Youths, Feed Olympics

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

SOME OF THE NATION'S leading sports figures will meet with sports writers and broadcasters here Monday under Attorney General Tom Clark's program to bring more boys and girls into healthful recreational activities.

The meeting will be held in the Justice Department building and Mr. Clark and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will address the group.

Among those who will sit in with the sports writers and broadcasters to formulate plans for 1948 are:

Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Football Commissioners Bert Bell of the National League and Jonas Ingram of the All-America Conference and Fred Corcoran of the Professional Golfers' Association.

AMONG IMPORTANA ITEMS which the group will take up are:

1. How to carry out a proclamation issued this week by President Truman for a Nationwide effort in this field.

2. A proposal that funds be raised to provide food for athletes of all nations in the Olympic Games in London next summer.

President Truman's proclamation called on State and local agencies to set aside the month of April for a study of problems confronting youngsters, and to make recommendations for improving conditions.

Mr. Truman said that unsatisfactory conditions are a "reflection on the failure of our society to afford to all of its young people a full measure of protection and opportunity for health and happiness."

THE SPORTS WRITERS and broadcasters committee assisting in Attorney General Clark's program will ask baseball, through Chandler; football, through Bell and Ingram, and golf, through Corcoran, to make facilities in these sports readily available to youngsters all over the country.

These leaders in professional sports also will be urged to work out programs of their own for big kid's days, not only during the month of April but the entire sports year.

The proposal that America provide food for athletes of all nations in the Olympic games will be made by writers and other persons closely associated with this country's major sports undertakings.

Hershey Faces Lions Tonight

The Washington Lions, bolstered by the return to action of goalie Gordon Bell, will meet the Hershey Bears in an American Hockey League game at Uline Arena tonight at 8:30.

Bell, who missed most of the New Haven game because of a bad cold, will lead the local crew against a third-place Hershey club which is rated a slight favorite.

Help the Boys

Haight Says There's A Moral to All This

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

WHEN DAVE HERMAN, sports publicity specialist, comes into our office, I have a way of determining to what extent I fit into his immediate plans.

If he says, "Hello, Walter" and let's it go at that, I'm not so important. Should he add a few pats on my shoulder, I'm about to be asked to write a small item. But if he greets me, pats me and then scratches my back—that's all, Brother! He won't settle for anything less than a column.

Haight

The other day Dave went all the way. When I hunched over to let him get under my right should blade, he knew he had me and whispered, "How about doing a piece about the Police Boys Club campaign?"

I promised.

I h At home that evening, the family was sitting around and I got out the portable typewriter.

"If you're going to tell some more of those stories about your misspent boyhood," upped the married woman I live with, "please include the family out."

"I'm going to have the Little Potatoes, We're Hard to Peel, in it for a laugh," I said, referring to my boyhood gang.

"LISTEN, POP," broke in our model son (Mack Truck model), "Don't write about being chased by the bicycle cop and how your gang jumped in the manure pit and slammed down the door and he rode over it for a hour looking for you."

I realized at that moment the children were growing up and I'd have to be careful.

I was snapped back to mental attention when he continued, "Forget that stuff yo uhave written before. Why not tell them about the time your Little Potatoes stole a car and went to Glen Echo."

That one startled me. I couldn't remember ever having mentioned it. I eyed his mother and she replied with a "I didn't tell him" look.

He went on with "Or it might be a good one about the racket you guys had of stealing pigeons out of the man's coop in the back yard and then going around front and selling them back to him."

That one almost French-fried me. I began figuring he must have some supernatural powers. I knew he wasn't the seventh son of a seventh son, etc., but he had me so stumped I almost asked him for a three-horse parlay at Hialeah.

HE WAS BAD ENOUGH, but his sister popped up with, "Why don't you write about the cat woman up the block who used to give the boys a quarter for burying each dead cat and how you saw to it that business was brisk?"

I knew I hadn't even told her mother about that. I began checking up on just what they might know.

In desperation I yanked out a dollar and said, "You kids drive up and get some ice cream."

As they went out the door, our darling daughter turned and laughed, "What's the matter, Pop, can't you take it? You had better think twice before you scold me again for coming home late from the Hot Shoppe."

When they were gone I asked "Mother, how do you think those kids learned about that stuff?"

She replied, "Doesn't it occur to you that little potatoes grow up to be big potatoes and big potatoes sprout and so there are little potatoes."

I got it—but darned if I wouldn't like to get hold of the old, rotten former Little Potatoe who told his little potatoes so they could tell my little potatoes, if you know what I mean.

Twin Bills Will Break 5-Way Tie

An important 3:30 p. m. interhigh doubleheader pitting Western against Anacostia and Roosevelt against Eastern at the National Guard Armory highlights today's 21-game scholastic basketball card.

The clash between two of the top teams, Roosevelt and Eastern, will reduce the joint first place occupancy by one.

The duel for top scoring honors between Wally Warner of Anacostia and Wayne Brizendine of Western will be brought to a head when their teams clash in the opener of the afternoon twin bill. Warner leads the league with 47 points and Brizendine is third with 40.

The Coolidge-Central game will see Bobby Rohr, stellar basketball, baseball and football star at Coolidge for the past three years, making his final appearance before graduation next week. Rohr will be assigned to guard Central's Jimmy Pantos, the loop's second high pointmaker with 41.

The nightcap will provide Tech with its last chance to stay in the race for the championship playoffs. Loser of its first three games, Tech will be eliminated if Wilson wins.

Scoring Pace of School Stars Superior to That of Pro Aces

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THIS YEAR'S scoring feats of Wally Warner of Anacostia and Roger Kingsbury of St. Albans have made the shooting records of Washington's schoolboys look superior when placed beside those of the professional Basketball Association of America.

Warner, interhigh's leading pointmaker with 47 points in three games has sunk 13 per cent more of his shots than his pro counterpart, Joe Fulks of the Philadelphia Warriors. While Fulks has dropped in 25 per cent of his field goal tries, Warner has made good on 21 out of 55 cracks at the basket for a 38 per cent average.

Kingsbury's 40-point performance in a game last Monday against Coolidge compares very favorably with the pro record of 47 set by Carl Braun of the New York Knickerbockers earlier this season. Kingsbury was playing under high school rules which specify playing time as 32 minutes. Braun's record was set under pro regulation time of 48 minutes.

When Carl Hubbell opens the New York Giants baseball school in Sanford, Fla., next week, he'll find three Washington boys on hand. They are Second Baseman Harold (Shorty) Nitowitz and Outfielders Danny Bass and Irv Shear. Nitowitz and Bass played at Coolidge High, and Shear at Roosevelt . . . One of the 1000 Marines sent to reinforce U. S. forces in the Mediterranean last month, was Nick Chumbris, baseball and football star at Central and Roosevelt in 1945 and '46 . . . Washington's two most promising junior tennis stars, Gil Bogley and Jackie Yates, are proving their athletic versatility at Landon school. Bogley has scored 118 points in eight games to lead the basketball team to the top of the Interstate Athletic Conference standings. Yates plays left-inside on the Landon soccer team that has won 29 straight games . . . Paul Pacini, McKinley Tech basketeer, who missed only one out of 12 foul shot attempts in interhigh competition last season, has already missed six out of 15 this year . . .

Gustave Ring's Master Mind Wins at Hialeah by 2 Lengths

D. C.-Owned Sprint Ace Pays $17.80

Hialeah, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Master Mind, a Brookmade Stable castoff now flying the yellow and red silks of Gustave Ring, routed nine other sprinters to pay the liberal odds of $17.80 for two in today's featured Seashell Purse.

The Psychic Bid gelding, which recently figured in a dead heat with Nowadays, left no doubt about the result this time, clicking with ease by two lengths under Apprentice Peter Gifford. F. W. Hooper's Colosal just got up to head the Wheatley Stable's Arrogance out of the place.

It was estimated that close to 13,000 fans witnessed the Seashell running, which gave high class platers a chance to shine. The event was fashioned for horses in the $20,000-15,000 claiming brackets.

Gifford got Master Mind away just behind the fast-breaking Gold Bull but eased back to fifth position to await the right moment to strike. Gold Bull was joined by Arrogance, Sophocles and Colosal and that group raced in a bunch to the turn. Arrogance, a filly with a smart triumph behind her, assumed a narrow advantage on the bend but Gold Bull still was in the thick of it and Master Mind ranged alongside the front pair.

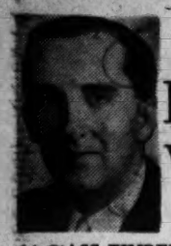
One on the Aisle—

Slicking Up Sinclair



Even Lana Does Well With 'Cass'

By Richard L. Coe

"CASS TIMBERLANE," at the Capitol, is such a slick article it should have been patented rather than copyrighted.

The crowds in the big theater yesterday were proof that M-G-M was on solid ground when it bought this Sinclair Lewis novel for the talents of Spencer Tracy and Lana Turner. Adapted by the smooth typewriters of Donald Ogden Stewart and Sonya Levien, the film glitters with self-assurance.

There couldn't, for instance, have been a finer Judge Timberlane than the beamish Tracy. Lana Turner, whose studio's belief in her acting ability is one of the greatest loves this side of heaven, actually does a creditable job as Ginny. The supporting cast is all plush and the result is probably as patly close to its makers' dreams as such things can conceivably be.

The Lewis story had the skeleton outlines of the very picture it has become. A Midwestern judge, fortyish, meets up with a lively young woman, in love with art and baseball, and is promptly bowled over. They marry. She tires of his friends, finds Grand Republic, Minn., dull, and yearns for New York. She lures the judge to Manhattan, where he realizes how much Grand Republic means to him. Cass goes home, Ginny stays for an abortive affair with a friend of his, soon learns that the friend's not interested in "The Real Thing" and, as the story ends, we find her back with Cass in Grand Republic.

All for Love

It was the Lewis style and his entertaining digressions which made this story palatable reading, however inferior it may be to his earlier works. His excursions into the private lives of Timberlane's associates had a biting, rambling style which the movies rarely achieve, let alone attempt. It is but one difference between the printed word and the moving picture which has yet to be satisfactorily bridged.

In exchange for the Lewis style, Metro has inserted that style of its own to which we already have referred. The love story is the thing.

There is, however, a beguiling addition to the Lewis story by Stewart and Miss Levein. They have brought the story up to last night and inserted a whiff of the plot Arthur Miller used for "All My Sons"—shady dealings in war contracts by Cass' pals, the Wargates. Because he decides to prosecute these friends, Timberlane adds another few inches to his inherent nobility.

It is an angle to which no one who follows the press can object, but it is the sort of thing which, if highlighted, would have mighty Metro abjectly salaaming before the Un-American Activities Committee. It's mildly surprising that Hedda Hopper hasn't condemned Metro for this suggestion that Americans can be other than patriotic citizens. But, then, Donald Ogden Stewart already is in the doghouse.

Hal Leroy on Stage

The Capitol's stage show for this suave make-believe is brief. A rather remarkable couple named the Johnstons make considerable whoopee on two xylophones in a lively overture with Sam Jack Kaufman's orchestra. The Johnstons get such fun out of their rapido clinking we almost trotted off and bought a set of our own. The Johnstons are good fun to listen to.

Hal Leroy tops the bill with his taps and they're still as rapid-fire as ever. Ross Wyse, jr., and Peggy Womack make with the gags. This week all the stage acts are working from the orchestra pit, a nice novelty that gives the three sets added zing.

The Atomic Age

Tiny Bombs May Kill Infections

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—The possibility of planting and exploding tiny atom bombs within living human bodies to wipe out localized concentrations of disease has been raised by experiments of that kind on animals.

The feasibility of this idea, suggested today by Dr. C. A. Tobias of the University of California, depends upon whether scientists can develop ways of controlling the power of the explosions and whether they can devise methods of planting explosive atoms in the right places within the body.

Dr. Tobias reported in the journal, Science, on experiments with white mice.

Incredibly small amounts of uranium 235, the substance used in the first two atom bombs, were injected into the mice at Oak Ridge, Tenn. Three days later the mice were put briefly within the range of a neutron beam. The neutrons, which act as detonators, caused the uranium atoms to explode.

The animals lost weight progressively, their fur became scraggly and diarrhea developed. They became anemic and, in three weeks all of them were dead, Dr. Tobias reported.

Radiation from the tiny atom bombs was 27 times as deadly as beta radiation from radium, he said.

Dr. Tobias said the process has medical possibilities. It also is important, he said, because among the 50,000 persons now working with atomic energy some may become contaminated with fissionable elements. If these individuals should come into contact with neutron beams the result might be disastrous.

One Institution Is Urged for Md. Defectives

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—A separate institution for defectives would ease many problems in Maryland's penal system, Reuben Oppenheimer, director of the Department of Correction, said today.

"Other States have found it advisable and helpful to provide institutions for defective delinquents," he said in a letter to Governor Lane.

The suggestion was part of a report Oppenheimer submitted on the department's program for employing and educating prison inmates.

The Governor said he would turn the report over to a 13-man committee appointed yesterday to study prison labor and rehabilitation activities.

Strong Market For Md. Crops in 1948 Is Foreseen

Denton, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—A strong market for Maryland farm products in 1948 was predicted today by Prof. Arthur B. Hamilton of the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University of Maryland.

Speaking in connection with a three-day Caroline County farm institute, Hamilton said he expected a hungry world to provide a high demand for processed vegetables.

Earlier in the day the group was told by Dr. Carroll Cox of the University Plant Pathology Department that the best-adapted antiblight treatment for Eastern Shore tomatoes is the alternate use of three sprays of zerlate and two sprays of fixed copper at 10-day intervals, beginning when the fruit is about half grown.

Booklet for Md. Farmers

A booklet on the job of marketing Maryland's 200-million-dollar annual farm crop can be obtained free at the State extension service offices here, the University of Maryland's agricultural college announced yesterday at College Park.

Warrenton Mother In London About Son

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Marsyl Montgomerie-Charrington of Warrenton, Va., has arrived to consult lawyers about the custody of her son, Robin, 6. She is the former Marsyl Stokes of Washington, D. C.

She said the boy was taken from her home in Virginia last December by her husband, Robert.

Mrs. Montgomerie-Charrington said her husband wrote that Robin had chickenpox.

Attorney's Point Was Too Well Made

Logan, W. Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—Essaying to demonstrate a discrepancy in a witness' story, Attorney W. F. Damron grabbed an object from counsel table and made as if to hurl it in a wide arc.

"It" happened to be an ink bottle—minus the cork, and the ink splattered in the face of Assistant Prosecutor Claude A. Joyce and on his papers.

Damron's "Excuse me, please," was drowned out by laughter, including the judge's, and the attorney completed summing up his case.

Layman's Cancer Cure Claim Wins Recognition; Test Is Set

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 29 (AP).—The New South Wales government announced today that it will investigate the claims of John Braund, who says he has a cure for cancer.

Braund, a 79-year-old Englishman, claims he has been treating cancer for 50 years and striving for recognition all that time. He is not a medical doctor.

Braund said he was willing to share his secret method of treatment with the world. He also expressed the hope there would be a place for a physician from the United States in his planned clinic.

Praised by Cancer Specialist

Several Sydney people declare Braund saved them after doctors had pronounced them incurable. He has attracted the attention of the medical profession—and at least one favorable comment from that direction.

The investigating committee will include four members nominated by the medical profession and three lay observers. Braund can name an equal number of practitioners.

A Sydney cancer specialist watched Braund remove growths from a woman's back yesterday and told a reporter the growths could not have been treated by "orthodox surgical methods."

One Stage Kept Secret

Braund said under his treatment the patient's bloodstream is "purified" and circulation throughout the body is "equalized." An injection is made "at the root of the cancer" which kills the growth. The cancer "shrinks away from the flesh" and breaks through the skin. The cancer is lifted out with forceps and the wound is dressed and left to heal.

Somewhere in the treatment there is another stage, the Englishman said, "but that is a secret—the greatest secret in the world."

Fish Commission Hears Proposals On Md. Waters

Baltimore, Jan. 29 (AP).—The State Game and Inland Fish Commission today approved three proposals, two of them affecting waters in western Maryland.

1. Open Evitt's Creek in Allegany County from Route 40 to the Potomac River for fishing for all species other than trout during the regular seasons.

2. Make it lawful to catch white perch in nontidal waters from February 1 to November 30, throughout the State.

Milk Drivers Call Off Strike

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Milk drivers canceled a strike called for today and continued working under a last-minute agreement that gives them extra compensation for the return of empty bottles.

The threatened walkout of some 100 members of Local 924, Dairy Workers Union (AFL), would have affected five companies and crippled local milk deliveries.

Adoption of the bottle conservation plan, Federal Conciliator James A. Holden reported, solved the snag of an increased pay demand by drivers by enabling the firms to grant it without boosting retail prices.

The new contract provides for a 44-hour week for inside workers, with overtime after 40 hours.

Million Set To Walk Out In U. S. Zone

Stuttgart, Germany, Jan. 29 (AP).—Labor leaders tonight ordered a strike of approximately one million workers in the American-occupied German state of Wuerttemberg-Baden.

The 24-hour walkout to protest food shortages will begin at midnight Monday.

The call came as union representatives in the British-occupied Ruhr and Rhineland gathered to discuss similar action that might involve three million other German workers. Those union leaders will meet tomorrow in Muehlheim.

The strike in Wuerttemberg-Baden will affect such cities as Stuttgart, Karlsruhe, Ulm and ancient Heidelberg. Less than a week ago one million workers staged a similar strike in Bavaria, another United States zone state.

The Wuerttemberg-Baden Trade Union Federation exempted from the strike call all workers in public services.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor, told a Frankfurt news conference:

"I think that the demonstrations to date have served a popular purpose. If they go further, they might serve a very harmful purpose."

Clay added: "If these demonstrations result in serious interruptions to the German economy, I am sure they might lessen the desire of other parts of the world to help Germany."

Labor leaders in Wuerttemberg-Baden said they want to protest "the inefficiency and indecisive actions" of the German state government, especially in regard to the food situation.

Judge to Prevent Gambling Urged For Anne Arundel

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Governor Lane was asked to disregard politics today in appointing a judge and prevent "wide-open" gambling in Anne Arundel County.

The request was made by representatives of the Anne Arundel County Citizens Protective Association. They conferred with the Governor privately about appointing a successor to Judge William J. McWilliams. McWilliams will leave the bench March 1.

After the conference Justin G. Buch, president of the association, said, "we have heard rumors that when Judge McWilliams leaves the bench, gambling will be wide open in Anne Arundel County.

"We are not opposed to gambling, but we are opposed to organized gambling.

"We asked the Governor simply to name a man who knows the law and is free of politics."

Anti-British Revolt Leader Of 1920 Forms Iraq Cabinet

Baghdad, Iraq, Jan. 29 (AP).—Mohamed El Sadr, a leader in the 1920 revolt against British rule, formed a new Iraqi cabinet today succeeding Salih Bey al Jabur.

Crowds assembled before the government building demanding the execution of Jabur and the former pro-British Premier, Nuri Pasha Es Said. Jabur resigned two days ago when his efforts to obtain ratification of the British-Iraqi treaty of alliance collapsed in the face of violent outbreaks that cost many lives.

(Jabur's wife said in London he had fled to Trans-Jordan. He had departed from a British air base in Iraq.)

Premier El Sadr is a member of the Shia Moslem sect and was prominent in the nation's politics until the second World War.

The new cabinet includes three former premiers. The new minister of supply, Mohamed Mehdi Kubbah, is leader of the Independence Party. Kamel Achderchi, leader of the National Democratic Party, which did not join the cabinet, said he assumed the Independence Party's inclusion meant the new premier had consented to abrogation of Jabur's treaty with the British, the holding of new elections, and the punishment of government officials responsible for the killing of demonstrators against the treaty.

Bigger Air Force Held Needed

New York, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Greatly outnumbered American occupation troops in Europe face the "ever-present danger" of being trapped as were United States troops on Bataan, in event of another war, W. Stuart Symington, secretary of the Air Force, said today.

Symington

Symington, writing in the American Magazine, pleaded for building up America's Air Force, pointing out that one of its main jobs would be to support an evacuation of Europe in case of war and implying that the present "green" Air Force was not capable of handling that job.

The Air Force, too, he said, must be capable of protecting this Nation of striking effectively at the enemy's war machine. Push-button warfare is at least 10 to 15 years away, he said, and if World War III comes it will be fought with improved versions of the weapons now on hand not with atomic, radar-guided rockets launched by scientists in underground shelters.

Lie Hopeful U. N. European Sessions Will Be Productive

London, Jan. 29 (NYHT).—Trygve Lie, Secretary General of the United Nations, expressed the hope here today "the General Assembly sessions of 1948 in Europe will be more successful that in New York."

Ending a European survey of possible Assembly sites, Lie said the choice rests between Geneva, Paris, Brussels and a site in the Netherlands.

"I have felt many times that the United Nations in America is a little isolated from the European nations," the Secretary General said. "Now we will be meeting in Europe, which is still so close to the war, and that may have some effect on the minds of the nations of the world."

These are members of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. This is the Committee that voted 12 to 9 against letting the House of Representatives vote on the bill to permit the President to continue his control of the use of grain by Whiskey distilleries. The Bill, S1842, passed the Senate unanimously last Friday. The identical provision was passed by the House of Representatives a month ago. We believe public opinion will asure its overwhelming repassage by the House and we appeal to the committee to reconsider, and bring this measure to the floor for a vote.

Unless there is statutory control of grain use by distillers by midnight, January 31, full scale use of grain for liquor production will be resumed. The distillers will begin using grain at the rate of millions of bushels a month—grain that is urgently needed to feed the hungry.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Washington, D. C., January 23, 1948

Hon. Ralph E. Flanders
United States Senate
Dear Senator Flanders:

This is in reply to your informal request of January 21, 1948, for information as to the action taken by this Department under authority conferred by Section 4(b) of Public Law 395, 80th Congress, 1st Session, together with the reasons therefor.

You are, of course, familiar with the continuing need for shipment into war-devastated areas of large amounts of food grains, in order to bring about stability and to assist in the reconstruction of such areas. A substantial part of the grain shipped to these areas must come from the United States. In 1946-47, over one-half of the world export total came from this country. The need to continue a high rate of grain exports has been definitely established. Such shipments are an integral part of United States foreign policy and are essential to the national defense. There will still be a serious deficit between real needs abroad and the total which can be supplied, even if every bushel is shipped which can be spared after meeting essential domestic requirements and providing for the minimum carry-over of reserve stocks as required by law with respect to wheat. There is attached for your information a tabulation showing the supply and disposition of the United States grain crop for the crop year 1946-47, and estimated supply and disposition for the crop year 1947-48. Under these circumstances, definite steps to conserve grain and to reduce all non-essential uses in the United States are required in the national interest and the Congress so recognized this necessity in enacting Public Law 395.

Prior to the enactment of Public Law 395, the Citizens Food Committee which was appointed by the President on September 25, 1947, to promote voluntary food conservation, developed a number of voluntary grain conservation agreements with industry and agricultural groups. The distilling industry was one of those participating in this program. The industry agreed to close down for 60 days beginning at midnight October 25, 1947. However, it was apparent that a program for continuing reduction in the use of grain by the distilling industry would be necessary in order to meet the critical emergency with respect to the supply of grain for authorized foreign aid programs and for essential domestic uses. This was due to the fact, in part, that after initiation of the voluntary grain conservation program in the latter part of September and while negotiations were being conducted with the distilling industry to effect conservation, the industry stepped up its production during the first 25 days of October to such an extent that the result was a consumption by the industry in excess of 8,000,000 bushels of grain during this period. The use during these 25 days was equivalent to two months' operation at the abnormally high scale of operations prevailing in the fiscal year 1947, and virtually nullified any savings contemplated by the first month of the shutdown under the voluntary program. This operation took place at a time when the distilling industry had stocks of whiskey on hand representing a six years' supply.

During the period of voluntary shutdown, representatives of the distilling industry met with representatives of labor and of this Department in an endeavor to work out a voluntary program which would be effective after the termination date of the voluntary shutdown. At the last of such meetings, representatives of the distilling industry informed the Government that it was impossible for the industry itself to agree on any program and requested that this Department prepare a program to be submitted to the industry. Accordingly, the Department of Agriculture did prepare a program proposing the allocation of 2½ million bushels of grain for the period from December 25, 1947, to January 31, 1948. A public meeting was called for December 17, 1947, at which representatives of the distilling industry were invited. This meeting was informed that because of the critical grain shortage the Government could not support any allocation to the distilling industry in excess of 2½ million bushels of grain per month, particularly in view of the large stocks of whiskey held by the industry. However, the distilling industry could not reach any agreement with respect to a voluntary program.

Congressional leaders were advised of the facts and of the opinion of the Secretary of Agriculture that failure of the distilling industry to reach a voluntary agreement threatened the other voluntary programs in effect under the food conservation plan. Thereafter, Public Law 395 was enacted and the order allocating grain to distillers was issued by this Department. The formula set forth in the order permitted the use of grain from December 31, 1947, to January 31, 1948, upon the basis of the availity of an amount of grain equivalent to 2,500,000 bushels, less the amount of grain used by the industry from October 25, 1947, through December 31, 1947. This figure was arrived at by taking into consideration all requirements for grain and computing the estimated savings which would be made by the complete shutdown from October 25 to December 25. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, it was estimated that a total not in excess of 35,000,000 bushels of grain would be available for the production of ethyl alcohol for industrial and beverage purposes. It will be noted that an allocation of 2,500,000 bushels of grain for the production of distilled spirits or neutral spirits for beverage purposes is at the rate of 30 million bushels per year. It was felt that in the face of the critical need of grain for food uses, the distilling industry should not use grain for the building up of stocks, particularly in view of the fact that, as of June 30, 1947, stocks of aged whiskey on hand in the industry were in excess of 464,000,000 gallons. This was the largest inventory since the year 1942 and was only 10 per cent less than the amount on hand in that year, which represented the highest inventory in the past 11 years. As of November 30, 1947, we are informed by the Alcohol Tax Unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau that there were on hand in bonded warehouses 463,406,000 gallons of aged whiskey and over 45 million gallons of neutral spirits. This does not take into account stocks in the normal channels of distribution from bonded warehouses to consumers.

Pursuant to the provisions of Section 2 of Public Law 395, I have initiated steps to determine the possibility of effectuating voluntary agreements or plans for the conservation of grain by the different groups of industrial users. In this connection, a meeting was held on Tuesday, January 20, 1948, to which all members of the brewing industry were invited, and meetings have been scheduled for January 27 and 28, 1948, with representatives of other industrial users of grain. As previously noted, all efforts to effectuate such an agreement with the distilling industry have failed. I have not submitted a recommendation to the President with respect to a report to the Congress, under Section 6(a) of the aforementioned act, relating to a continuation of mandatory controls over distillers because it was felt advisable to endeavor to submit a recommendation for an integrated program for mandatory control of all industrial uses of grain with respect to which a voluntary agreement or plan could not be developed. In view of the time required for effective consultation and negotiations with industry, it is felt that an extension of the authority to control the use of grain by distillers beyond January 31, 1948, is urgently needed.

Sincerely yours,

Clinton P. Anderson

Maryland's Income Tax Is Outlined

(This is the first of three articles dealing with Maryland State income tax returns.)

By John Trimmer

The State tax is not due until April 15, but it is just as inevitable.

Comptroller James J. Lacy advises citizens to be ready to pay up when the levy is due if they want to avoid penalties. It may be paid all at once or in four quarterly installments.

Income tax division experts are visiting various cities to help bewildered citizens fill out returns.

Pointers Are Offered

The first question that pops up is who must file a return?

As in the case of Federal income tax paying, many people must file returns even though they don't pay any tax.

1. A single person with an income over $1000 for 1947.

2. A married person whose income was over $1000 and who was not living with husband or wife.

3. A married person with a total income of over $2000 who was living with husband or wife.

4. A person whose gross sales or receipts in a business or trade were over $5000.

5. A married couple living together whose combined income was over $2000.

6. A married couple whose combined gross receipts or sales in a business or trade were over $5000.

Tax Forms Mailed Out

Out-of-State persons who earn their salaries or do business in Maryland must file returns, too. This includes Federal workers whose job are performed within the State of Maryland.

Persons who are in the armed forces stationed in Maryland are not subject to the tax unless they claim Maryland as their home State.

Tax forms have been mailed out already to thousands of citizens who paid the levy last year. They are available at many banks, postoffices or any place income tax division experts are on hand.

In paying the State income tax, residents of Maryland may use one of several forms. Most persons will choose the short form. This is officially numbered 503. It is much easier to fill out than the longer returns.

Use of Short Form

Only those with income of $5000 or less may use the short form. Besides, you can't use the short form unless your income is from salary, wages or pay for personal services. Also not more than $100 of your income may be from such sources as dividends, interest and annuities.

Persons who had unusual losses during the year may choose to use the longer forms. Others who cannot meet the requirements for the short form must use one of the longer forms. This group includes persons classified as nonresidents.

A glance or two at the short form will tell most persons whether they will have to pay any tax. But in any case, those who are required to fill out returns must conform to the law whether they must pay or not.

Tomorrow: How to use the short form to pay your State income tax.

Opera Guild Production Unfortunate

By Paul Hume
Post Reporter

To mock the cause of the young American singer under the pretense, no matter how well intended, of helping him, does him the greatest disservice.

Van Lier Lanning was eminently justified in refusing to conduct the three one-act operas of Puccini presented last night by the Washington Opera Guild in Lisner Auditorium, if we may judge from the end product.

To be sure, there were some beautiful voices on the stage. We need only mention Carroll Mattoon, Leonard Lloyd, William Groff or William Miller in evidence. But it was difficult most of the time to believe the statement that these operas have been in preparation since last August.

Fault lay not with the singers but with the artistic direction of the company. Minor but inexcusable details of staging, costuming and other matters fell below the standard set by the average high-school production. Last night's tickets cost as much as $3.

Marcel Vigneras deserves credit for conducting performances which we feel might better have been postponed. He used orchestral accompaniment for "Sister Angelica," though he had no time to rehearse with them. Piano accompaniment was the sole support of the "The Cloak" and "Gianni Schicchi" after the dramatic but musicianly departure of Lanning the night before.

Lanning made the point that the lack of preparation in all departments of the production made it impossible for him to go through with the performances. He showed more discretion than the guild's artistic director

4-H Leaders Advised Not To Be Bossy

By The Associated Press

Maryland 4-H Club leaders were urged yesterday to adopt a "work-together" attitude in dealing with 4-H Club members.

Dr. R. Lee Hornbake, professor of industrial education at the University of Maryland, College Park, Md., told club leaders to "avoid an autocratic attitude" and to consult with club members in planning group activities.

Dr. Hornbake was one of three speakers addressing the first local leader training school for State 4-H Club leaders, sponsored by the university extension service.

Sixty-nine club leaders from 20 Maryland counties will close their three-day session with group discussions today.

Edward W Aiton, field agent of the U. S. Department of Agriculture here, told the class that the "successful club leader" is most likely to be a farmer or homemaker himself.

Stanley Sutton, assistant county agent of Kent County, urged leaders to include recreational activities on every club meeting program.

Dr. Clarence B. Smith, former assistant director of the Federal Extension Service, addressed the banquet last night.

Club leaders interested in tractor maintenance will visit the Agricultural Engineering Laboratory today, while other leaders take part in group discussions.

Assistant county agents are attending the school along with 4-H Club leaders.

Punch Drunk Fighters Get Surgical Relief

Boston (U.P.).—Punch drunk boxers can be restored to normal mentality by a delicate brain operation, according to Dr. Frank H. Lahey, director of the Lahey Clinic.

The so-called "punchy" pugilists, he said, suffer from a subdural hematoma—a slowly accumulating blood clot—which can be removed by the operation.

Lahey told the eightieth annual meeting of the American Academy of Dental Science that hematoma, produced by slight head blows, may not cause unconsciousness and may remain undiscovered for months, but often results in mental changes and even insanity.

He said that in the case of prize fighters, surgical removal of the hematoma has resulted in complete relief.

Mrs. Whitemore Heads School Unit

Other officers are Mrs. R. F. Kalso, Falls Church; Joseph McDowell, McLean; Mortimer Lebowitz, Langley, and Mrs. W. J. Van Ryzin, Arlington. The school voted approval of a $7000 budget for the rest of the school year.

Two Can't Live As Cheaply Anymore!

Couple Eats on $12 Weekly Budget By Canny Shopping, Meal Planning

By Lucia Brown

THEY used to say two could live as cheaply as one. Nowadays, two can't even live as cheaply as four did in prewar times when it comes to food!

That's the prize headache of hundreds of young newlyweds who, like Peggy and Loren Jenks of Arna Valley, are trying to start married life on a budget.

Today's young couples have to spend a much larger share of their first year's income on food than did older brothers and sisters in their early married days before the war. Prices on everything families buy have gone up, of course—about 65 per cent on the average, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. But food tops everything in its rise. The cost of eating now is about 103 per cent more than in the 1935-39 period.

"That's where the money goes," sighs petite, brown-haired Peggy Jenks, as she checks over her food bills and discusses ways and means she and Loren should employ to keep them at a minimum.

Married only last June, the young Jenks have recently moved into an apartment in nearby Arna Valley, Va. Loren, a veteran of three years' service in the Army, is attending George Washington University under the G. I. Bill of Rights. Peggy, who graduated from G. W. last year, has a job in the office of Senator Ernest W. McFarland of Arizona to help out the family exchequer.

"Loren still has two more years in college and, with furniture to buy and a lot of other expenses, we just can't afford runaway food bills," she says.

"WE TRY to keep our weekly food spending under $12 and usually do, I believe," she continues. "We spend about $10 on groceries for meals at home. I eat lunches out five days a week, but usually not very much. Loren comes home for lunch as often as possible after morning classes. We buy things that are plentiful on the market and, believe me, we never throw anything away!"

In keeping their food bills around $12 weekly, the Jenks are due congratulations on good management. Right now, Miss Dorothy Bovee, Red Cross nutritionist, figures the cost of a minimum adequate diet for a family of two in Washington is at least $11.60 weekly. Last June, the same amount of food would have cost $10.86 weekly.

It takes pretty close figuring to keep the total at $11.60 now and still include a sufficient variety of food to make the diet interesting and well-balanced. It requires buying when foods are plentiful, taking advantage of specials at the stores, overcoming of food prejudices and making full use of leftovers.

The following grocery list shows one way it can be done. It provides food for a family of two for a week. Menus based on this food follow. The prices are taken from last Friday's grocery ads in Washington papers and from quotations by local stores this week. Those in your own store may be higher on some things, lower on others. The list was made up with a careful shopper in mind. Some prices quoted are those you get when you buy staples in fairly large quantities—but not too large to run the risk of spoiling when there are only two to feed.

THE high cost of eating is reflected in the bills young Mr. and Mrs. Jenks are looking over here. Peggy, a Washington girl, and Loren, who is from Wilwaukee, Wis., were married last June. He is an Army veteran and a student at G. W.

"BELIEVE me, we never throw anything away!" says pretty Peggy Jenks in discussing how she and her husband, Loren, manage to keep their food bills under $12 a week. She finds the electric roaster Loren gave her for Christmas grand for warming over food without drying it out

Your Questions On Homemaking

My brother-in-law and his bride plan to honeymoon in Washington. At one time he lived in this city and had acquired a number of friends. I would like to make a Sunday evening gathering to introduce my sister-in-law to her husband's friends. Shall I telephone the invitations or send informal notes? I'd like for this to be from eight o'clock until ——. However, I may have to plan for it to be from four until seven. What do you suggest I serve at either time? Should any of the guests ask me if it's necessary to bring a gift, what should be my reply? Would a small wedding cake be appropriate? Any further suggestions would be greatly appreciated. A. H.

The invitations for such an informal reception as you plan can be either telephoned or sent by informal note. If the guest list is long, it is usually less time consuming to send the invitations by mail. At either of the hours you suggest, it would be appropriate to serve a fruit punch and tea or coffee, dainty open-faced sandwiches, wedding cake, mints and nuts. Or, if you wish to serve more elaborate refreshments, you could serve a salad such as chicken, assorted sandwiches, wedding cake and coffee. The food could be arranged prettily on the dining room table, with wedding cake and candles as a center piece. Ask one or more friend in advance to pour and help serve. The guests could be served as they arrive, thus allowing them to come and go when they wish. Or, if the guest list is not too long, they could be all served at the end of the party. If your brother-in-law's circle of friends is large, the refreshments would be served as the guests come, because more guests can be entertained this way than when they are all served at once. The answer would be "no" should the guests ask if it is necessary to bring gifts.

I have a green plastic air pillow that leaks at a seam. Have tried several adhesives and tapes but nothing sticks. How can I repair it? J. H.

If your pillow is made of vinolyte plastic, and most of them, are, the seam can be sealed by applying heat. Set the iron to the temperature used for ironing rayons and press the seam. Be very sure the iron is not too hot.

Is there any store where single records from a phonograph album may be replaced when broken? M. H. P.

I understand that, while local record shops do not carry such records in stock, they will order them for you. It generally takes from two to four weeks for them to arrive.

My apartment has parquet floors which have slight cracks between the boards and the blocks. The apartment is about 3½ years old and I have never had heavy rugs on the floor, but use a few cotton scatter rugs. On several instances, I have

Exercises Will Slim Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

Figuratively speaking, the only exercises that are any good are those you take! But taking an exercise correctly makes it twice as good . . . for the figure.

How fast can exercise streamline? In the groove, you can slim ½-inch off the waist in a week. In 10 days you can feel fit, not fat, through the middle measurement. And glory be, your skirt can fit noticeably smoother over the hips. Nice going! But as we say, only the exercises you take are slimming, so ease into streamlining with a couple of warming up all-over stretchers.

The first warm up is to stretch arms overhead, hands clasped, and stretch up as you look forward. Relax and repeat. Follow by flinging right arm up and stepping back with right foot . . . now stretch all along right side. Release, back to position and fling left arm overhead, step back with left foot and pull along that side. Pull up firmly with the lower abdominals and do not arch small of back. Repeat three times.

Movement: Raise both arms overhead as one knee is bent and lifted toward chest. Try again, lifting opposite knee toward chest, and this time try to touch small of the back to wall. The emphasis on this exercise should be in pulling up with the girdle muscles, as knee is bent toward chest, and in pulling the waist out of the hips as arms are raised overhead. Three times . . . later six . . . later 12.

Movement: Pulling snugly up with middle muscles, slowly bend toward right side, and keeping arms up to shoulder level, bend until you can touch right fingers to floor at the right side. Do not crumple up in the middle! Back to position, pull snugly up again and bend to the left. Repeat three complete times, alternating sides.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Happily Married to Young Wife, 21, Man Is Disturbed by Desire to Make Love to Sweet Girl, 14, Who Is Deeply Religious

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bit ashamed to confront you with this problem, but it is a very real condition and one that bothers me quite a little.

You see, I am happily married to a girl, 21, who is several years my junior. There is a girl, 13 or 14, who lives in part of the house where we reside, and she seems to have cast a spell over me.

By this I mean that I am almost hopelessly infatuated with her. It isn't physical desire, for although she is rather pretty, she is deeply religious for her age and already planning to become a Franciscan nun.

She radiates a feeling of peace and understanding to those around her, in such a way as to assure me I never could touch her without her consent; and because she is so religious, I know that consent would never be given; nor do I want it. It isn't that kind of attraction.

Thinks Girl Senses Truth

I WORK nights and see her only on the days I am home, but when I do see her I want to take her in my arms and cover her face with kisses. There are several reasons why I refrain from it. One reason is my wife. Though I tease Ann (the girl) often, telling her she is my girl, I am sure my wife suspects nothing.

As for Ann, I don't know how much she knows. On Christmas eve when she visited us, she blushed when I teased her and each time I looked at her. Though I haven't talked to her since. I have the feeling she really knows the whole story.

Please tell me how to overcome this; or at any rate, how I can let her know how I feel. This may sound ridiculous; but it is both very real and disturbing, so please help me. E. G.

Impulse Tends To Criminality

DEAR E. G.: Your interest in the girl is strictly carnal, and your feelings, if voiced or enacted to her, would border on criminal violation of laws which uphold common decency. You would be moving in the direction of seducing or contributing to the delinquency of a minor, as indeed in your tangled thoughts you are doing already.

You are somewhat abashed by the artless purity of the girl's personality and her spiritual flights of fancy, but you haven't the slightest sensible sympathetic appreciation of her serious, amiable, innocent temperament, or you wouldn't commit the crude offense against youth's vulnerable feelings of "teasing" her in a patronizing way, much less in a sexually insinuating way, as is your pratice.

However, that's somewhat beside the point, which is that your impulses and cogitations definitely justify guilt-feelings on your part. You should indeed be ashamed of nursing them as the motif of day dreams, and to the extent that you habitually indulge that line of fancy you are progressively corrupting your own powers of self-control.

Think Straight In Self Defense

SO, for advice, unless you are a moronic sexual psychopath—though you speak with rather more intelligence than that—you will banish them from consciousness beginning now, as a practical measure of self-defense, to keep yourself on the right road in life: that is, out of jail or a mental hospital.

Talk things over with the family physician to clear your head, if you must have more help; and bear in mind that the average decent man, no matter how strongly endowed with libidinal energy, is sufficiently master of himself never to traffic consciously with temptation to despoil pre-adolescent or tee-nage naivete. As I see the picture, you've never seen fit to bridle your libido up to now—and it's time you harnessed the animal and put reason in the saddle. M. H.

noticed that the dust which apparently has collected in the cracks of the floor is pushed up and, upon investigation, have found small mothlike worms in the cracks. In every instance, it has been on a section of the floor that is walked over constantly. I found moth holes in one old sweater but believe they came from some old Army clothes which have been disposed of and which were in the apartment a very short time. The worms were in the floor cracks before the old Army clothes were brought into the apartment. Is it likely that the worms in the floor are moth worms, and is there something I might use on the floor to rid it of the worms without ruining the finish? The use of a vacuum sweeper has not cleared up the situation. I have not heard other occupants of the apartments complain about this situation; however, everyone else that I know of has heavy wool carpets on their floors. D. J. R.

The worms may be either the larvae of clothes moths or carpet beetles. For positive identification, kill two or three and send them to Mr. C. F. W. Musebeck, insect identifications, 3130 South Agriculture Building, Washington, D. C. To eradicate them, loosen the dust in the cracks with a wire and brush out or pick up with vacuum cleaner. Then with an oil can, run carbon tetrachloride into the cracks. If care is taken not to get more carbon tetrachloride into the cracks than they will hold, this should not affect the finish on your floor. The worms are probably noticeable on the used section of the floor because walking over it loosens the dirt in the cracks there and makes it easier for the eggs and worms to enter.

My little girls have several bonnets trimmed in a white fur which I believe is coney. How can I clean this fur? It gets soiled before the hat itself and even dry cleaning by the commercial cleaners does not prove satisfactory. Will powdered pepsin do the job? If not, I would appreciate any information as to what will make the fur snowy white again.

T. J. A. Jr.

The appearance of the fur can be somewhat improved by rubbing bran, or corn meal into it. It is more effective if the dry bran is heated before being rubbed in. Allow to remain several hours and remove by brushing and light beating. This method, however, will not make the fur snowy white again. I believe the only thing which will accomplish that is to shampoo it. Remove the fur from the bonnet, and using thumb tacks, fasten it to a bread board or flat surface so it won't curl. Now, just dampen the fur with warm water and using liquid shampoo, rub it into a good lather, continue to work lather into the fur with the hands or soft brush until clean. Remove excess suds with the hands and then by dipping a cloth into clear warm water sponge until all trace of soap is gone. Change rinse water frequently. When soap is removed, buff with a dry cloth to dry fur and fluff it. Untack fur strip from the board and sponge leather side with dry towel to remove excess moisture. When as much moisture has been removed in this way as possible, place in an airy place to dry. Do not place near heat while drying. Every so often during drying, brush to fluff the fur. Work the skins between your hands, too, to keep them from getting stiff as they dry.

Stalin Was Ready to Join Axis But on Terms Spurned by Nazis

(This is the last of five articles based on the captured German documents, published by the State Department, on Nazi-Soviet relations from 1939 to 1941.)

By Ferdinand Kuhn

Stalin lost little time in responding to Hitler's offer. He had Hitler's promise of a glittering prize—a vast sphere of Soviet influence "in the direction of the Indian Ocean." He could have it all without entering the war, and by the simple process of joining the German-Italian-Japanese alliance.

On November 26, 1940, two weeks after Hitler had dangled the prize in front of Molotov in Berlin, the Russians delivered their answer through the German ambassador in Moscow. The Soviet government was "prepared to accept" the draft agreement as the Nazis had outlined it, but subject to four conditions.

The first was the immediate withdrawal of German troops from Finland, with the assurance that Germany would continue to get Finnish lumber and nickel supplies.

Russians Demand Base

The second was that "within the next few months" Russia should get a mutual assistance pact with Bulgaria and also "a base for land and naval forces of the USSR within range of the Bosporus and the Dardanelles by means of a long-term lease."

The third was that "the area south of Batum and Baku in the general direction of the Persian Gulf is recognized as the center of the aspirations of the Soviet Union." Apparently the Nazi phase "in the direction of the Indian Ocean" was too vague to satisfy the Kremlin.

The fourth was that Japan renounce her rights to concessions for oil and coal in northern Sakhalin; the island just north of Japan which had been half Russian, half Japanese.

The Russians pointed out that these conditions would mean amending the Nazi draft of the treaty and its secret annexes. In particular, they wanted a new secret agreement providing that Turkey's independence and territory would be guaranteed if she agreed to "a base for light naval and land forces of the USSR on the Bosporus and the Dardanelles."

No Direct Answer

Still another secret agreement would have to make it plain that if Turkey refused, "Germany, Italy and the Soviet Union agree to work out and to carry through the required military and diplomatic measures."

Molotov said he would "appreciate a statement of the German view," but he never had a direct answer. Once, weeks later, when he asked for the answer, he was told that the Germans were still consulting their Italian and Japanese allies.

But he had indirect answers of the most ominous kind.

The first came in January, 1941, with reports of enormous movements of German troops into Romania. On January 17 Molotov summoned the German Ambassador to tell him of reports that these troops were ready to march southward into Bulgaria. He warned that the Soviet government would consider "the appearance of any foreign armed forces on the soil of Bulgaria or the straits as a violation of the security interests of the USSR."

The Germans did not deny it. On January 21 they admitted "carrying out certain troop concentrations for the sole purpose of preventing the British from gaining any foothold on Greek soil." If any campaign against Greece were necessary, German troops would march through Bulgarian territory.

Bulgaria Joins Axis

The second indirect answer came on February 28, with the announcement to Molotov that Bulgaria had agreed to join the German-Italian-Japanese alliance," and that German troops had been shifted to Bulgarian soil.

Molotov received this news "with obvious concern" and "with great gravity," the German Ambassador reported, and said the Soviet Union "could not remain indifferent" to what was taking place.

The Russians made just one serious attempt to counter these German moves in the Balkans. On April 4 they suddenly made a treaty of friendship and nonaggression with the new pro-Allied government of Yugoslavia, which had overthrown the pro-Axis government of Prince Paul only a week before. The German Ambassador in Moscow told the news by Molotov, commented that a "very unfortunate" moment had been chosen.

The Ambassador knew what he was saying, for only two days later the German army and air force attacked Yugoslavia and bombed Belgrade. Molotov could only comment, several times that "it was extremely deplorable that an extension of the war had thus proved inevitable after all."

The Drift Continues

It was obvious that the Germans had lost interest in luring Stalin into their Axis alliance. Ribbentrop, talking to Japan's Foreign Minister Matsuoka in Berlin on March 27, confided to him that Molotov's conditions for joining the Three-Power alliance were "unacceptable." Germany needed the Balkan Peninsula for her own economy, and was not inclined to let it come under Russian domination. Moreover, he said, the Russians had been secretly cultivating ties with England.

Ribbentrop said he knew Stalin personally and did not assume Stalin was "inclined toward adventure," but he couldn't be sure. Meanwhile, he tried to goad his Japanese visitor into a quick attack on Singapore, and Hitler repeated the process in a talk the same day.

The Russians, for their part, gave no outward sign to the Germans that they knew what was brewing. As long ago as January, 1941, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles in Washington had warned the Soviet Ambassador that the Germans were planning to attack Russia in the spring. The information was passed to Stalin and was repeated five weeks later; Winston Churchill also sent similar warnings from London.

Still Partners on Surface

Yet in their dealings with the Germans the Russians still behaved like partners, in accordance with the pact they had signed in 1939. They continued faithful delivery of grain, oil, manganese and phosphates to Germany. Their controlled press treated all events concerning Germany "in an unobjectionable manner," the German Ambassador reported.

On April 13, only a week after the German onslaught against Yugoslavia, Stalin gave the Germans an extraordinary sign of what they took to be his friendliness toward them. Stalin himself came to the railroad station for a ceremony of farewell to Matsuoka, on his way home to Japan.

He first greeted Matsuoka and the Japanese officials "in a remarkably friendly manner." The German Ambassador in Moscow, who was at the station, went on to report the story as follows:

"Then Stalin publicly asked for me, and when he found me he came up to me and threw his arm around my shoulders: 'We must remain friends and you must now do everything to that end!' Somewhat later Stalin turned to the German Acting Military Attache, Colonel Krebs, first made sure that he was a German, and then said to him, 'We will remain friends with you—in any event!'"

The Germans Strike

The German Ambassador in Moscow was convinced Stalin was peacefully inclinded and ready to make still further concessions. His professional chiefs in the Beflin Foreign Office were sure a war with Russia would be an unnecessary disaster.

But Hitler and his army had other ideas and other plans. By the middle of May foreign embassies in Moscow were buzzing with rumors of impending war, and there were official complaints on both sides of border violations by Soviet and German planes.

Finally, at 4 o'clock on the morning of June 22, 1941, Ribbentrop summoned the Soviet Ambassador to his office to tell him that Hitler had decided "to take military measures." Without an ultimatum, without a declaration of war, Nazi planes and guns had already struck on a 1500-mile front from Finland to the Black Sea.

CAIRO DOES IT AGAIN. Between Jay Jason and the Radio Aces, the Club is tossing the speediest and hottest show ever seen hereabouts since Ted Lewis left town. It's a masterpiece of wackiness. Draws the crowds, too. Opening night looked like a night back in hectic '44 . . . BLOWING BUBBLE GUM. A bubble gum promoter, enchanted with Buster Loose's rendition of "I'm Always Blowing Bubble Gum," distributed his product to all Rainbow Room customers. Everyone in the room began to blow bubble gum. "What a sight!" recalls Head Waiter Mischa, still shuddering slightly.

HIGH STYLE. Rita Dimitriou, alluring Greek chantoosey of the Old New Orleans, has been on a shopping spree. Her loot includes a Diro inspired black creation with a lace edge bustle crape coming around to form a smacking big bow in front. Saucy bustle puffs also adorn a bright pink taffeta. The dream gown of the collection is a white satin with luscious gold embroidery at the sweeping neckline . . . Toni (Dark Eyes), accordionist at Michael's, wears immense earrings made of gold sequins.

SNEEZE—BUSTED ARM. Bill Strickland, orchestra booker, whose bands you hear at various spots around town, recently felt a sneeze coming on. After a coupla preliminary puffs he sneezed so powerfully that he slipped and fell. Now he's nursing a broken arm. Indirectly, this seems to be a tribute to Margie Strickland's beautifully polished floors.

The strolling violin idea, always ingratiating, has been revived by Julian Altman of the Pall Mall Room. Julian plays request numbers at individual tables and the odds are 999 to 1 that he'll know your favorite.

THE ROAD TO CALIFORNIA proved the road to heaven for Silvio Bianchini, Ciro's lovable veteral waiter of 23 years' service. Silvio went to the West Coast for a holiday in November, recently died suddenly in Los Angeles. As a young man he studied voice and his happy disposition was always impelling him to burst into operatic solos in spare moments when he could drop his tray. "Mayor" Ciro Gallotti took charge of the last rites for Silvio in Washington and the funeral was attended by Ciro's entire staff.

BANDSTANDING. Madrillon's Johnny Robb keeps a date book showing the birthdays and anniversaries of customers. Thus he's always ready to give a nice send-off to the right people at the right time . . . "Daddy" Didn't Have to Explain That One to Her

Unless you're familiar with the brand of potato chips which features a picture of the Capitol on its package, you won't get the point of this item.

Betty Anne Cooksey of 217 12th st. ne., tells me about the little girl who boarded the Mount Pleasant streetcar with her father the other day, and proceeded to show a lively interest in the passing scenery.

As such unusual building caught her eye, the child's piercing voice was heard to ask, "What's that, Daddy? What do they do there?"

Daddy answered as best he could, and it wasn't long before everybody in the car was following the conversation intently. As the trolley approached the Capitol, the other passengers braced themselves for the usual "What's that, Daddy?"

But the little girl fooled them. As she sighted the stately dome, she sent everybody into stitches with:

"I know what that one is, Daddy. That's where they make the potato chips."

WALL STREET KILLING

When the policeman rang the doorbell, the young lady stopped her piano playing and asked: "What do you want, officer?"

MISCELLANY

Gladys Solomon of 2127 California st. nw. is a veritable mine of information about Connecticut and its history. She's especially good on the story of the Charter Oak, but if you're not careful she'll slyly work the conversation around to the Connecticut Society's second Charter Oak Ball (Shoreham Hotel, tonight at 10) . . . Mrs. Carl J. Lundmark, jr., of 3810 W st. se. reports that she's having no luck in her search for a pressing of Gene Autry's "Springtime in the Rockies" . . . And Albert Wesselman of 1789 Lanier pl. nw. says there's a surprising dearth of pedometers in the District. (I thought every Boy Scout had one). But Al mutters that he's found only one in Washington—and it's busted . . . The Highlands Citizens' Association has booked two good speakers for Wednesday's meeting (8 p. m., Walter B. Patterson School, South Capitol and Elmira sts.). The Highlanders will hear Congressman A. L. Miller of Nebraska, chairman of a House subcommittee on Health and Education, and Dr. Carl Hansen, associate superintendent of District schools . . . The Junior Jewish Consumptive Relief Society will feature a beauty contest at its membership dance tomorrow night (8:30, Hamilton Hotel Gold Room, "stag or drag"). Proceeds are used in maintaining a nonsectarian sanitarium in Denver . . . Mrs. Edna Arnette of 245 Wesmond dr., Alexandria, Va., was a bit flustered when her walk down Constitution ave. was interrupted by a cabbie who called to her. But she was grateful when Hacker John A. Simms of 1135 Oates st. ne. said: "Here are your gloves, lady. You dropped them back there at 17th st."

BULGY BENJY

My recent reference to "Fuzzy Wuzzy wuzza bear" reminds Mrs. Walter H. Wallace of 711 14th st., Alexandria, Va., of this bit of doggerel:

"Benjy saw a bear; the bear saw Benjy. The bear ate Benjy. The bear was bulgy; the bulge was Benjy."

G. I. HOUSING NOTE

War With Russia Isn't Necessary

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's note: Today Drew Pearson in his series of columns on USA-USSR relations, tells how the struggle with Russia can be won without war.)

When Herbert Bayard Swope coined the phrase "cold war" for his friend Bernie Baruch, it was another way of saying that we have to fight to win the battle of peace. If we don't we'll find ourselves in a hot and bloody war.

SWOPE

The trouble with fighting the battle of peace is there are no trumpets, no parades, no uniforms. Yet in actual fact the urgency is just as great as when we are at war.

And even though Congress, as usual, lags behind the people, I am convinced that the majority of Americans have come to realize that we've got to continue the patriotic endeavors that attend war without the killing that attends war.

Looking at our possibilities of future war from the vantage point of recent trips through both Europe and the United States, the conclusion of this observer is that war with Russia can be avoided. It can be avoided if we are smarter than they are, work harder than they do, and outmaneuver them in the battle for peace.

Battle Plan For Peace

To win this battle of peace, a four-point program, in the opinion of this observer, is necessary. Unfortunately, until this battle is won, we can't afford to relax our armed air strength. But meanwhile here is a militant program to win the peace:

1. The Marshall Plan—Whereby Europe can recover economic stability.

2. A United States of Europe—Whereby Europe can recover political stability. This is just as essential as the Marshall Plan, in fact more so. Because the Marshall Plan is sure to fail unless Europe is given faith and hope—a new political goal.

3. No Depression in the U. S. A.—This is just as important as aid to Europe. For what the boys in the Kremlin want most is depression in the U. S. A., thereby giving them a chance to point a finger at the United States and say: "We told you so; capitalism will not work." To prevent inflation and subsequent depression a lot of unpleasant things such as high taxes and price controls will be necessary.

4. An American People's Army for Peace—This may sound idealistic and visionary, but it isn't. It's surprising how many individual Americans are already working at the job of peace. Take, for instance, American labor.

Irving Brown, AFL international representative in Brussels, is quietly going about the job of getting acquainted with European labor leaders, selling them on the United States, winning them away from communism. Single-handed Brown is doing more for peace than a battery of people in the State Department.

Another great job is being done by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. They are setting up a clothing factory in Italy to teach American labor methods, prove firsthand that American labor is not downtrodden and that Italian labor doesn't have to be Communistic. Simultaneously, Mrs. Sherwood Anderson has gone to Italy for Amalgamated to set up YMCA's and American sports clubs among Italian youth.

Another labor leader active behind the international scenes has been David Dubinsky of the International Ladies Garment Workers, who is close to Vice Premier Saregat of Italy and is credited with helping persuade some of the Italian Socialists to bolt the Communists.

U. S. Newspapers Abroad

Two other fine jobs of building American friendship are being put across by the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune and the Rome Daily American.

Less known is the work of some former GIs who stayed in Italy after the war and set up the Rome Daily American.

Another fighter in the battle for peace is Walter Lemon of the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation in Boston, who pumps a constant stream of short-wave broadcasts over Europe, Asia and Latin America.

There are all sorts of other people doing their share in the battle for peace—so many I can't even begin to list them. A lot of magazine publishers, for instance, are sending their periodicals free to American consulates abroad.

In Lyons, France, I visited an unheated, crowded little room where French students sat reading American literature. When a niggardly Congress curtailed money for the State Department's information program, United States Consul Horatio Moores had filled this room with magazines patriotically sent by American publishers. In Marseilles, Consul General Cecil Gray has done the same.

Then there is Mayor Mike De Salles of Toledo, who is urging foreign-born Americans to write to their friends and relatives abroad, especially behind the iron curtain, refuting Communist propaganda about the United States of America.

And by no means least of all, there are the several million Americans—the chambers of commerce, the service clubs, the veterans, the school children, the farmers and housewives who got out and worked to put across the Friendship Trains.

Life on earth

There has to be a little rain . . . And now and then a tear . . . To help us all appreciate . . . A cheerful atmosphere . . . The sky was not intended to . . . Be blue the whole day long . . . And life was never meant to be . . . An everlasting song . . . But here and there we have to face . . . The troubles that abound . . . If only as a test to keep . . . Our feet upon the ground . . . We have to have a certain share . . . Of sorrow and regret . . . And learn the way to struggle with . . . And liquidate a debt . . . For these are all a part of life . . . And we must prove our worth . . . If we would gather sunshine and . . . Enjoy our days on earth.
